UIC raiding provincial treasury, civil servant charges

'Unemployed dumped on welfare'

By LORRAINE ATHERTON
Colonist Reporter

A provincial civil servant has charged the Unemployment Insurance Commission with "robbing the provincial treasury" by arbitrarily withholding unemployment benefits and forcing the temporarily jobless onto welfare rolls.

Walter Muller, a job-finder for welfare recipients in Vancouver and a Social Credit candidate in the last federal election, estimated that about 20 per cent or $24 million of B.C.'s welfare payments went to people whose unemployment insurance benefits had been delayed or "callously" cut off.

That estimate was a conservative one, Muller said, because it was based on welfare statistics released in September. Since then, rising unemployment had escalated the problem and UIC appeared to be making it even tougher for people to collect benefits, he said.

In Victoria, Janette Shelton, vice-president of Community Action Group, agreed with Muller.

She guessed that the number of individuals who went to her group with unemployment insurance problems had increased by 10 per cent in the last three months. Although she handled mainly formal appeals to the UIC, she said, she knew of many people who had trouble simply finding out whether they qualify for benefits.

One woman had been waiting six months, she said.

People had always complained about UIC, and problems had increased with the recent jump in unemployment, Ms. Shelton noted.

The delays must certainly cost the human resources department, because "our usual course is to send these people to social assistance," she added.

Every available ship thrown at huge slick

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Singapore mobilized all available ships and men Tuesday night in a massive effort to contain and disperse a million-gallon oil slick already threatening the western part of the port, the world's fourth largest.

The 10-mile slick came from three ruptured tanks of the Japanese 237,698-ton supertanker Showa Maru, which ran onto rocks five miles southeast of Singapore at daybreak Monday.

Habitual crime will draw longer terms

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

Tougher terms of probation and longer jail sentences are in the offing for habitual criminals in B.C., according to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

Macdonald said Tuesday that he was "increasingly coming to the opinion that some people cannot be rehabilitated. All the noble experiments of the past 20 years simply do not work in the terms of prison rehabilitation of people."

On Jan. 23 the attorney-general will be meeting with federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and local municipalities on the Lower Mainland to discuss crime and policing problems.

"We shall try to present a case for better-trained police services and more extensive police services," Macdonald said. "And we shall continue to emphasize the need to prevent crime."

The attorney-general said the time had come when decisions must be made on "who is dangerous to society and therefore has to be confined, or under some form of probation that protects society."

Non-dangerous criminals will be treated differently, Macdonald said. "Where alternative forms of sentencing can be imposed without endangering society, that will be our aim. We shall be sure that these people are not damaged and made worse than they are at the present time in terms of anti-social behavior."

Macdonald said the matter of bail laws was also on the agenda for discussion.

Record wage accepted

Freights rolling on BCR tracks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first freight trains to move on British Columbia railway tracks since a strike by shopcraft workers began six weeks ago were in operation Tuesday.

Two northbound trains, one out of North Vancouver and one out of Prince George, started moving shortly after a new nine-month contract between shopcraft workers and the railway was signed.

A spokesman for the government-owned railway said it would take about seven days for operations to return to normal.

The 550 employees, members of five shopcraft unions, voted 242-to-106 in favor of a new nine-month agreement which Norm Farley, chief union negotiator, said would make the workers the highest-paid railway workers in North America.

The contract includes a wage increase of $1.29 an hour which raises the basic tradesman rate to $7.09 an hour from $5.80. It also provides for an inquiry into labor-management relations between the crown corporation and the unions.

Company and union representatives signed the new contract Tuesday.

When the shopcraft workers walked out Nov. 21, the company had offered an increase of 87 cents an hour, while the unions were seeking an immediate increase of $1.25 and another mid-contract increase of 20 cents an hour.

The new contract expires July 30.

The strike had resulted in layoffs of about 2,000 of the 3,200-member BCR work force.

The strike led to temporary food shortages in some areas dependent on the railway, which runs from North Vancouver to Fort St. John. The dispute also resulted in further cutbacks in an already depressed forest industry in the province's interior.

British hijacking

Fake gun, fake bomb —and fake airport

LONDON (UPI) — A man of Arab appearance seized a British jetliner in flight and extorted $235,000 in ransom Tuesday in a bluff with an imitation pistol and a dummy grenade. The hijacker was captured when the pilot flew him to an airfield near London instead of to France as the gunman demanded.

The hijacker, in his late 20s, was overpowered by a police doghandler as he ran from the plane after landing at Stansted airport, 34 miles northeast of London.

He left the ransom behind in the plane and was carrying what Scotland Yard deputy commissioner Wilfred Gibson said was a "replica pistol." As for the suspected grenade cannister carried on the plane by the hijacker, Gibson said, "No explosives have been found."

The only casualty in the capture was British Airways steward Alan Bond, 35, one of five hostages the hijacker took. He was nipped by a police dog in the scuffle on the darkened airfield.

Gibson said the hijacker refused to answer police questions and he could not immediately identify him or his motives. He described him as of "Arab appearance with very long hair and a mustache. He spoke good English to the pilot but he is almost certainly not British."

The hijacker seized the British Airways twin-engined BAC111 on a flight from Manchester to London and allowed the 46 passengers, most of whom were unaware of the hijack, to file off when it landed earlier at London's Heathrow airport.

Outlook always the same

Outlook for six-year-old Pinkie's Boy, Dorset horn ram at Geoff Mitchell's Sea Bluff Farm in Metchosin, is obscured by growth of his massive horns. But his past is productive — an expected 80 lambs this season on farm where he is sole sire. Mitchell says Pinkie's Boy has to turn head sideways to see what's in front of him. Harassment by police?

COURTENAY — Harassment of juveniles by police is one of several complaints drawn to the attention of a subcommittee named here to survey the need for an ombudsman.

Subcommittee member Joyce Hicks has told a steering committee that other items brought to her group's attention included:

- Unemployment benefits being cut off without notice.
- Juveniles being unable to see a lawyer before a court appearance.
- Police tearing apart houses when executing search warrants.
- Insufficient facilities for juvenile offenders, and the need of more psychiatric examination for juveniles.

While the matter of an ombudsman has been tabled until later, the steering committee has recommended that a justice council be set up in the Comox Valley at a public meeting tonight in Courtenay elementary school.

A proposal that the steering committee remain in office to draft a constitution and set guidelines will be among re-

Four dead in riot by 12,000 miners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A riot by 12,000 striking workers idled the world's largest gold mine Tuesday and left four miners dead and 22 injured, police said.

At least 4,000 men at Vaal Reefs, about 100 miles southwest of Johannesburg, told officials of the Anglo-American Corp. they wanted to terminate their contracts and go home to neighboring Lesotho. Anglo-American is South Africa's largest mining firm.

Hundreds of armed police remained on the alert at the Vaal Reefs compound, which houses 32,000 workers and is the largest gold mining complex in the world.

The strikers are protesting legislation in their country which compels its expatriate workers to deposit 60 per cent of their earnings in Lesotho banks.

Barrett presses Ottawa for talks on gas taxes

Premier Barrett accused the federal government Tuesday of further confusing the controversy over natural gas taxation and insisted that the issue be settled "next week . . . by a direct meeting."

In a telegram sent Tuesday, Barrett asked for a meeting next Tuesday of himself and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald with Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister John Turner and Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

The premier's telegram was in response to one by Public Works Minister C. M. Drury, who is acting prime minister, suggesting that B.C. adopt the same attitude in the dispute as the Alberta government.

At stake is up to $125 million in annual profits made by the B.C. Petroleum Corporation, which buys gas from producers and re-sells to consumers, mainly in the U.S. export market.

In the federal budget, Ottawa imposed taxes on gas producers at fair market value, a price much higher than the actual price paid by the corporation. Producers claim the effect will be to tax them at more than 100 per cent of their actual profits.

Alberta eased the burden on producers by increasing wellhead prices but B.C. has insisted that the federal move is an intrusion into provincial jurisdiction over natural resources.

The controversy has almost halted oil and gas exploration in B.C. and Barrett requested

DENVER (UPI) — Locals of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union were ordered Wednesday to continue working without contracts and to resume negotiations with petroleum companies across the country, averting for the time being a nationwide strike by refinery workers.

Snow misses Victoria

Up-Island roads virtually closed

Northern Vancouver Island roads were nearly impassable, the Malahat was treacherous and yet Victoria roads remained clear Tuesday night as a rapidly-moving Pacific weather front swept over the Island.

Campbell River RCMP reported a foot of snow just before midnight with more continuing to fall at the rate of an inch an hour.

Gold River and Kelsey Bay highways were in extremely poor condition, with more than half a foot of snow and snow-plows unable to keep up.

Close to 18 inches of snow was piling up on Courtenay and Comox roads by late Tuesday night and police there said few motorists were venturing out.

Three inches of powder had settled by early Tuesday night at Nanaimo and was still falling, and Duncan police said cars "were strewn all over the roads."

Fifteen minor accidents had been reported on the Malahat by 6 p.m., most involving cars which had been unable to climb hills, skidded out of control and landed in ditches.

At Sidney, between one and two inches fell and roads were in poor condition.

Snow fell steadily all day Tuesday at most up-Island points, but Greater Victoria received mostly rain.

The Victoria weather office described the fast-moving front as intense. It was one of the lowest pressure systems to hit the Island this winter.

The storm brought gusts of wind in excess of 60 miles an hour, sustained winds of 30 to 40 miles an hour and will probably bring snow showers to Greater Victoria today as cooler temperatures are expected.

ANDY CAPP

gorde hunter

SOME weeks ago I wrote a piece exploring the possibilities of Western Canada seceding from the rest of Canada because of the short shrift received by the west down through Confederation years.

Premier Dave Barrett was in Ottawa at the time attending the meeting of Canadian finance ministers and he made mention of the column to the assembled ministers, pointing out this was an expression of the feelings of many westerners. He urged them to take note of the growing concern and act accordingly.

"I want to speak openly and frankly today on the federal government's proposal in the budget to remove, as a tax deduction, the royalties paid by oil and gas companies.

"THIS is a matter of great national concern and I must be clearly understood in my remarks.

"The federal government, through its taxation policies, is encouraging greater ALIENATION and FRUSTRATION amongst a great number of Canadians, especially Western Canadians. These federal budgetary measures have almost overnight destroyed nearly two years of some progress and development emanating from the Western Economic Opportunities Conference."

Dave Barrett was telling them, but, as usual, they wouldn't listen to the truth.

HE IS, after all, merely a western province premier and easterners, naturally, know better what is good for the colonials west of Thunder Bay. Dave Barrett, however, is a rather insistent, persistent chap and the last few words of his statement in Ottawa bear repeating.

"I am now asking the prime minister to resolve this issue and adopt the recommendations I have made earlier. Let us break this impasse before IT BREAKS US."

You might have noted where Barrett has just telegramed Ottawa asking for the talks on natural gas taxation to be re-opened — a sort of last ditch effort to resolve the question as to the ownership and management of natural resources.

In a phone conversation with Premier Barrett the other day, I asked him about his "alienation" remarks to the finance ministers' conference.

"I'VE ALWAYS SAID I'm a Canadian first and a British Columbian second," Barrett answered, "but . . ."

His words drifted away, but the implication was obvious — Barrett feels it is time for either meaningful negotiations or, strong hint of action.

Insofar as the federal government's taxing of natural gas resources, Barrett was blunt.

"We decided about ten days ago that British Columbia will not back down on this issue."

Barrett insists the federal government set up the rules and then reneged on them. He refers to a statement made by Resource Minister Donald Macdonald.

"IN THE CASE of British Columbia," Macdonald said, "the additional revenues from export sales will wholly accrue to the British Columbia Petroleum Corporation, an agent of the British Columbia government. There have been continuous consultations with ministers and officials of the British Columbia government regarding export shortages and I have their assurances that everything that can be done to alleviate these difficulties will be done. I am hopeful that the additional revenues accuring to the B.C. Petroleum Corporation will materially assist in facilitating and accelerating arrangements for alternate and additional supplies."

With a statement like this in his pocket, Barrett naturally believed Macdonald recognized the right and duty of the province to continue operating as it had in the past. With this in mind, the B.C. Petroleum Corporation increased gas prices, committed the expenditure of $100 million for new facilities to increase the flow of gas, basically for U.S. customers. And contracts for new and capped wells were being negotiated that would result in over 200 million cubic feet of additional supplies.

Then, suddenly, Barrett had the rug yanked from under him. The federal budget announcement killed all the new activity and the shortfall to U.S. customers next year could reach 400 to 500 million feet per day.

Barrett makes one other very significant point.

"THE COMPANIES exploring for natural gas in our province have taken a look at the measures in the federal budget and as a result of their interpretations, have cancelled much of the activity that would have taken place this winter."

Like Pacific Petroleums — had planned a program of 28 wells. Most of them now cancelled.

Like Chevron — had planned a program of 12 wells and had taken options on five drilling rigs which would have been active in the north-eastern part of the province. Whole program cancelled.

Like Gulf — had planned an exploration program in excess of $100 million. Plan has been discontinued.

Barrett is a Canadian-firster, but even Canadian-firsters can have second thoughts when the dirty end of the stick is the norm rather than the exception.

And Barrett says he is through backing down.

Aussies build cricket lead

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Australia led England by 335 runs with nine second innings wickets intact here today at lunch on the fourth day of the fourth test match.

Australia, 123 for one at the start of play, was 225 for one at lunch after their first innings of 405 and England's reply of 295.

Unemployed dumped

Muller said that up until this week he would have estimated delays in processing UIC claims cost the province $2 million a year in welfare payments. But after comparing notes with other human resources workers and officials, he increased his estimate to as much as $24 million.

He pointed out that the figure is a quarter of last year's $100 million overrun in B.C.'s welfare budget. If the same thing is happening in other provinces, the amount of money involved must be staggering, he added.

The welfare recipient often comes out ahead, receiving welfare for as long as three welfare as UIC investigates his case, and then receiving a large unemployment cheque when it's all over. But the province has no mechanism for recovering thost welfare monies, Muller claimed.

A section of the UIC act provides for repayment to provincial welfare coffers, but the Social Credit government's plan to implement the section was never carried out, Muller said.

A human resources official who wished to remain unidentified disclosed to Muller that the department recently solicited reports from regional directors on the problem, and the deputy minister's office is now reviewing the possibility of recovering funds from UIC.

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi, deputy minister J. A. Sadler, associate deputy minister E. L. Northup, and their executive assistants were not available through their offices this week, but a lower eschelon official contacted in Vancouver said: "Something is under way at a higher level on this whole issue."

Another official in Victoria confirmed that pertinent statistics have been compiled but will probably not be available until the next session of the legislature.

Sadler, finally reached at home, said: "I believe we have recovered those costs in the past, but right at the moment I'm not aware of just where the situation stands." He said he would try to gather some figures on the problem today.

When questioned about department plans to study the effect of UIC delays on welfare costs, Sadler replied: "We're always looking at our programs."

Apart from welfare costs, Muller criticized the UIC for "grossly unfair" practices in view of high unemployment and the collapse of the job market.

"People are considered guilty until proven innocent," when it comes to UIC investigations, Muller said. "The onus is put on the person to prove he is looking for work. You practically have to have tape recordings of job interviews and signed affidavits from employers.

"Most of the people I see sincerely want to work," but UIC demands that some people take jobs unrelated to their skills or work experience, or that would create transportation or housing difficulties for the worker.

The reason most commonly given for cutting off insurance is that the recipient has not proven he is "able, willing and ready," to work, Muller said.

That clause of the UIC regulations can be applied, or abused as Muller called it, because a person missed a job opportunity in his hometown while job-hunting elsewhere, or because a person decided finding a full-time job was impossible and started looking for part-time work, or because a person could not give written proof that he had applied for a particular job listed by Manpower, or because a single mother has a child to care for—the examples are endless, he said.

UIC officials may have been available for comment, but lines to the commission's Vancouver office were busy.

Habitual terms stiffer that we have not sufficiently distinguished between those dangerous to society pending trial, and those who should be free pending trial," Macdonald said. "As a result we have a bail supervision program getting under way where a person can be released pending trial but under strict supervision.

"We don't like the case, say, of a drug trafficker, who goes back on the street with a greater need then ever to sell more drugs, in order not only to satisfy his habit pending trial, but also to pay his lawyer."

The attorney-general said that in the setting of bail, judges should be granted more discretion under the Criminal Code and under law.

"Judges should have more discretion in terms of somebody who is apt to repeat his crime or repeat anti-social behavior," he said. "Just as they should have more discretion in deciding who should be free. We think we have seen far too many people denied bail in the past, people who are not going to be engaged in anti-social behavior pending trial. As a result the west wing of Oakalla has been crowded with these remand people.

"We are trying to do two things. Speed up the process so that these people can come to trial more quickly, and I'm hbpeful that by this summer we shall have a forced march in this direction to try and clear out some of our serious remand cases. And secondly, we have to think more in terms of bail supervision so that more people can be released pending trial because, you know, they haven't been found guilty at that point in time and should not be in jail."

The councils are developing out of the 12-member B.C. Justice Development Commission, formed to foster a system-wide approach to the planning of justice services, co-ordinating information-sharing, supporting innovative projects and promoting citizen participatilon in the justice system.

Gas controversy

Drury on Monday for an "urgent meeting" to settle the issue.

But Drury responded with the suggestion that B.C. follow the Alberta example although he added that, if Barrett isn't satisfied, he could arrange a meeting when Turner returns to Ottawa from Washington this weekend.

The issue could well end up in the courts, according to Attorney-General Macdonald, although he said Tuesday that B.C. hopes a settlement can be reached without recourse to this means.

"A court solution to that kind of problem is a last resort," Macdonald said. "That's not the way to solve national-provincial problems, but court proceedings cannot be ruled out."

The attorney-general said he was extremely concerned about constitutional aspects of Ottawa's latest move in the gas taxation field.

"Ottawa, using its taxing powers, has come in and told the B.C. Petroleum Corporation what it must pay producers in the field," Macdonald said. "In other words, it is setting provincial pricing for a provincial resource. Ottawa is very indirectly whipping the provinces into shape with this tax if we don't do as they say."

Macdonald said he considered Ottawa's action unconstitutional, but added, "a court case takes time. The expense is not an important factor, but the time and uncertainty, pending resolution in the courts, is certainly a factor in the resource field. That's why court action has to be a last resort."

Drury's insistence that the federal government will not change its attitude on the issue, and that B.C. adopt Alberta's position, drew this reply Tuesday from Barrett.

"Alberta's position as stated by Premier Lougheed, and previously acknowledged by the federal government, is not the same as British Columbia's. Your comments, unfortunately, only add further confusion in this regard.

"This matter must be settled next week and the only way to settle it is by a direct meeting."

Barrett told Drury he and Macdonald could be in Ottawa next Tuesday if a meeting could be arranged for that date.

The attorney-general said he had held ceveral telephone conversations with Ottawa Tuesday. "We still haven't arrived at a meeting date, but I'm hopeful that we will before too long," he said.

Your good health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Of all the new pastimes, my mother-in-law and her elderly friends have started to check everyone they can with Ketostix. I patiently gave in to quiet her down. Now she thinks I'm ill.

I stand 5 feet, 1 inch, weigh 110 pounds and am small-boned. I feel perfectly well, full of energy. I eat a well-balanced diet, except I don't care for sweets and eat very little bread, potatoes or starchy foods.

On the Ketostix, I show purple. She is sure I have something wrong because with everyone else the Ketostix has stayed buff-colored.

I don't think they know any more about reading the Ketostix than I do (absolutely nothing).

I just had a good checkup three months ago. — Mrs. D.J.F.

If your checkup included a urine sugar test and your doctor was satisfied, then you have little to worry about.

Ketostix are strips of paper, chemically treated to show the presence of ketones in the urine, which could be an indicator of the presence of sugar. Although I'm not big on home laboratory analysis, the Ketostix, sold in drugstores, are quite useful to diabetics who must keep a close check on their body metabolism. High ketone readings are a sign of faulty metabolism.

The combination of your mother-in-law's "findings" and your admission that you don't eat carbohydrate foods is interesting, however. A little more carbohydrate in your diet could change the test.

Ketones can appear in urine of persons on low-carbohydrate diets, a fact that those advocating such diets usually neglect to mention. The ketones, in fact, are organic acids left behind by inadequate "burning" (utilization) of carbohydrates.

They are stored in the body fluids and excreted in the urine. It's a sign the body has fallen back on protein and fats for energy.

This resultant excess acidity may be what your mother-in-law turned up.

It might be wise to take another look at your "balanced" diet.

You certainly should have a professional urine test — good advice, incidentally, for anyone going in for a general health checkup. Since you are not a diabetic, your doctor might want to see you getting a bit more of these starchy foods you ignore.

Goaltender quits Chiefs

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Kamloops Chiefs goaltender Mike Priestner, 19, of Calgary has quit the team, Jack Tennant, club general manager, said Tuesday.

Lack of ice time was cited as his reason for leaving the Western Canada Hockey League Team. Priestner came to the Chiefs earlier this season on waivers from Calgary Centennials after quitting that club after being relegated to second-stringer. He played in 16 games for the chiefs, recording a 3.95 goals-against average. Chief's other goalkeeper, Mark Earp, has the second-best average in the league, 3.46 and was sharing duties with Priestner.

Chiefs have called up Brian Henderson, 16, from ther British Columbia Junior Hockey League farm club, Langley Lords.

Burned-out sea queen headed for scrapyard

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — The two-year-old, $32 million Cunard Ambassador, luxury queen of the cruise ships, apparently will be sold for scrap because its fire-ravaged interior is beyond repair.

A three-day fire broke out aboard the 485-foot liner Sept. 12 while it was on the way around Florida to New Orleans to begin a new passenger service from that city to Mexican ports.

Olympic construction stops

Quebec hit by strikes

MONTREAL (UPI) — A strike by 1,200 iron workers Tuesday shut down major construction in the Montreal area, including work on the site for the 1976 summer Olympics.

A walkout by 2,500 provincial truck drivers entered its second day, delaying long distance hauling into the city, while employees at a fourth oil refinery voted to join a wildcat strike to press cost-of-living demands.

The iron workers, who have been out illegally since Nov. 27, are demanding a 50 cent an hour wage increase. Other construction workers were to return to work Monday after a two-week Christmas vacation, but the iron workers' walkout and other slowdowns have forced the layoff of over 20,000 industry workers.

Before Christmas, the National Assembly gave Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer the power to dictate wages in the industry, but the minister has taken no action. He said Tuesday he was "considering ways to solve the problem."

Olympic construction is already on a tight schedule, but one games official said increased overtime would make up for the delay.

The strike by the truck drivers, members of the Teamsters Union, struck about 40 firms. The drivers are demanding a $2 an hour increase over a two-year contract while the companies have offered $1.58 an hour over a three-year pact.

In the city's east end, 250 workers at Petrofina of Canada Ltd. voted Monday night to join a wildcat walkout by 400 employees at refineries operated by Texaco Canada Ltd. and BP Canada. Shell refinery workers have now joined the walkout.

Drug wards off heart problems

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Roy Ellis of Montreal says anturan, a drug, used for 20 years to treat gout, has been found effective in warding off strokes and preventing second heart attacks.

Research into the new use of the drug has been conducted in Canada for more than 10 years, he said in an interview. The Medical Research Council now is funding a $300,000 trans-Canada study to confirm the research findings.

Ellis said blood particles, called platelets, play a large role in stopping the bleeding in injured blood vessels. But, in a patient with hardening of the arteries, a condition that can lead to heart attacks or strokes, the platelets can build into clumps on the walls of the blood vessels.

Those clumps may become large enough to block the artery or chunks may break away from the clump and plug tiny blood vessels.

Ellis said observations made in 1965 by Dr. Hugh Smythe and Dr. Metro Ogryzlo of Toronto and Dr. Fraser Mustard of Hamilton showed that gout patients' platelets didn't last as long as those in normal persons.

Treatment with anturan restored the platelets to normal.

Other research has shown that persons suffering with hardening of the arteries had a significantly better chance of survival after being treated with the drug, Ellis said.

Villagers around Phnom Penh take to roads as fighting returns to area

10,000 flee Cambodian rebels

Refugee tells of atrocity

By CHHAY BORN LAY

PREK PHNEOU, Cambodia (AP)—"They attacked us with hand grenades and those who attempted to resist were being bayonetted and some had their throats cut. I have never seen anything so brutal and cruel in my 50 years. An atrocity is an atrocity whoever commits it, whether you are a Cambodian or not."

Sin Hong, a mother of five, described how more than 100 men, women and children were killed by attacking Khmer Rouge forces Monday.

The bodies were discovered by government troops when they broke through Khmer Rouge lines near this town just off Highway 5 about 10 miles northwest of Phnom Penh.

The victims were trapped by the insurgents on Jan. 1, the day the rebels launched their New Year's offensive against Phnom Penh.

Wandering slowly along a dusty road, nearly 10,000 refugees made their way to either Prek Phneou or Phnom Penh, where they could find a safe place to settle.

They came out from the woods where fighting still continued nearby. Their faces looked pale and grim because they had no food or water.

Forming a long line along the road, on ox-carts and bicycles, some on foot, they pleaded for help and begged for food from reporters.

Bun Lun, 59, said:

"I managed to escape from their hands along with my other six children because I stayed a little distance away from the others."

He said about 100 villagers managed to flee. Slightly more than 200 persons had been living in the area, he said.

14 Pakistanis adrift in boat

DOVER, England (AP) — Fourteen Pakistanis were found aboard a crippled cabin cruiser in the English Channel and were taken into custody by British customs officers, authorities said. A Royal Air Force helicopter spotted the drifting craft, after it flashed a distress signal and a lifeboat was sent to the rescue.

Grip tightens around Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese forces widened their territorial control Tuesday in fighting less than 100 miles north and east of Saigon. They threatened a second provincial capital after capturing Phuoc Binh, 75 miles north of Saigon, the first to fall in nearly three years.

The provincial capital of Tay Ninh was menaced after North Vietnamese forces captured the Black Virgin Mountain base camp and communications centre 70 miles southwest of Phuoc Binh.

The Communist-led troops damaged most of the signal equipment in the camp and forced 100 defenders to flee, the Saigon command said.

The camp lies on the northeastern approaches to Tay Ninh City, about 60 miles northwest of Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu announced a three-day mourning period for the loss of Phuoc Binh. All places of entertainment were ordered closed.

In other Indochina developments:

● The Phnom Penh command said that government troops killed more than 800 Khmer Rouge soldiers on three different fronts around the Cambodian capital. Government casualties were not reported. Government troops also reported discovering the bodies of 100 refugees bayoneted or blown apart by Communist grenades 10 miles from Phnom Penh.

● The Thai government urged North Vietnam to withdraw its troops from Laos and Cambodia and halt its support of Communist terrorists operating in Thailand. The appeal was in a letter sent to the North Vietnamese foreign ministry Dec. 26 and made public Tuesday.

● In Saigon, 100 persons protested the attacks against Phuoc Binh in a demonstration at the headquarters of the four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervision. It was the second such protest in two days.

● The National Assembly issued a declaration denouncing North Vietnam and appealed to the United Nations and the 12 signers of the international conference on Vietnam, which include the United States, China and the Soviet Union, to intervene to stop the "aggressive acts of the Communists" against South Vietnam.

Members OK church plans

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the congregation of Christ Church Cathedral voted 200-to-10 in favor of an agreement which proposes to limit development of the church's property during the next 105 years. In return the church would be paid more than $29.2 million during the next 104 years by Grander Developments Ltd., whose parent company owns most of the block surrounding the church.

Bridge cut blamed on helm

HOBART, Tasmania (Reuter) — The master of the freighter which partly demolished the Tasman Bridge here Sunday was quoted Tuesday as saying the ship's steering gear "went haywire" shortly before it struck.

Reliable sources quoted Captain B. J. Pelec, who is in hospital with two cracked ribs, as saying he sent two radio calls for help about 90 seconds apart. The second was sent about one minute before the collision.

The vessel, the heavily-laden 7,200-ton bulk ore carrier Lake Illawarra, sank after bringing down 450 feet of the roadway. Five of the crew were killed, and two bodies were recovered Tuesday from a car found by divers on the murky bottom of the Derwent River.

Police fear that as many as six cars might have fallen into the river.

Maritime sources in Hobart quoted other crew members of the Lake Illawarra as agreeing the steering gear failed as the vessel approached the bridge.

Market depression cited

Food aid for hungry can also be harmful

REGINA (CP) — Misguided attempts to increase food aid to countries struck by famine can do more harm than good, the president of the Saskatchewan Federation of Agriculture told the federation's annual meeting Tuesday.

President Glenn Flaten told delegates from the federation's 15-member organization that "many people who make statements about the need of moving food to those who are hungry have little comprehension about the complexities of these movements or the implications it may have to the country receiving the help."

"Food aid moving into a country can have a depressing effect on the market for its own production of competing foods, which will tend to lower production, thus producing the opposite effect to what is desired.

"Food aid can improve health standards in the relatively short term, thereby increasing population and unless measures are taken to correct the food situation they may end up worse off at a future time than before."

Other problems in food aid involved transportation and distribution inadequacies and in addition "food aid will not work unless there is a public commitment in the recipient country for its distribution to those who need it, without a rip-off by private traders who have little concern for those with empty stomachs."

Flaten said food aid can be only a stop-gap measure that must be accompanied by population control, development of more food production in the famine-affected countries and increased incentives for agricultural production.

Fearful Friday

IN A RUN-DOWN on the goings-on in outer space some concern was expressed by NORAD last summer for the safety of its high-flying aircraft. It was pointed out that there were, at that time, more than 3,200 man-made objects in earth orbit, and further, if the present rate of satellite rocketing continued, there would be 10,000 objects out there by the year 2000.

For the most part they would be bits and pieces of space machines that have done their work and broken up to continue whirling around the earth until descending into the atmosphere for a friction-fired finish. In the process, though, they could be hazardous to super-sonic aircraft in their increasing amount.

NORAD wasn't offering any solution to the hazard, but merely pointing to the possibility of collisions.

Safeguards are needed, though, and not just for high-flyers. This is made all too clear in the Cape Canaveral announcement of the possibility of some large pieces of space debris surviving atmospheric fire and reaching earth this Friday.

The re-entry of parts of the huge Saturn V rocket that put the U.S. Skylab into orbit in May, 1973, could have disastrous consequences. As many as 50 pieces could slam down on the U.S., Europe, South America, Africa or the Far East.

The U.S. space agency says there is no way to predict what the size and weight of any of the pieces might be, and that sections of a 6,000-pound bulkhead and parts of the five engines, each weighing 3,000 pounds, have the highest probability of reaching earth.

Not all of the small amount of space waste that has got through the atmosphere up to now has been fragmentary. A 640-pound piece of the Soviet satellite, Cosmos 316, landed in the state of Kansas in 1970, thankfully in a remote, uninhabited area.

Hopefully, the pieces in Friday's fall-out will be smaller and lighter, and the 70 per cent chance given for it hitting the Atlantic Ocean works out that way.

This sort of thing shouldn't be left to chance, though. It might be thought that through the technology developed to put satellites in orbit they could be rendered harmless at the end of their road with a self-destructing device.

Mortgage rate action

'Outsider' officials

VICTORIA'S MAYOR, like many a Victoria chief magistrate before him, and like many an alderman too and many a member of the city planning commission and other boards, is an Oak Bay resident.

In the past, this was possible because one could be a candidate in any municipality where one owned property — and there scarcely could be any argument that ownership of property in a municipality does not carry with it a concern for the conduct of the affairs of that municipality.

But the New Democratic Party government on coming to power saw things in another, and rather a strange way. Under NDP legislation, only residents of a municipality can vote in elections there; owning property does not confer a vote. Mayor Peter Pollen cannot vote in a Victoria civic election. But he could still run for office in the city, if he were to change his mind about stepping down at the end of this year. Under the same legislation, a registered voter in any B.C. municipality may seek election in another.

This too would end if Alderman Larry Mann of Esquimalt had his way, as he conceivably could. Mr. Mann has given notice of motion that he wants the council to petition the province for changes in the Municipal Act that would require all elected officials to be residents of the municipalities in which they are elected. He doesn't see, he says, how non-residents can serve well their electors.

The alderman may have a point, especially in regard to the smaller and more intimate municipalities. But then, on the other hand, the voters can always reject an "outsider" if they want. Victorians have had some good mayors and aldermen from Oak Bay — and they have not been thrust on them.

A change of spirit

LAST AUGUST in his B.C. Financial and Economic Review, Premier and Finance Minister Barrett abandoned the hypocritical practice of years and described liquor profits as liquor profits, not "contributions from government enterprises." It seems to have been one of several good omens, for more and more the Liquor Administration Branch appears to be moving toward serving its customers in a normal and attractive way.

In Victoria, the latest manifestation of the new spirit is a self-serve store recently opened at Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Cross Road, which joins two other new self-serve outlets opened during the past year in the area.

Another, downtown, may be in the offing. It would be on Yates and would replace the Government Street store. It depends on city council approval. The plan is to be commended, but with one condition. The customers' convenience demands adequate parking.

In Argentina

An escalating orgy of violence

By HUGH O'SHAUGHNESSY

Argentina enters the new year with no signs of any truce being declared in the bitter war of assassination between Right and Left which has claimed hundreds of victims over the last two years and which has become increasingly cruel since the death of General Peron six months ago.

Hardly a day goes by without the discovery of assassination victims — two early last month in a car outside the Teatro Colon, Buenos Aires's main theatre, three more later on a rubbish dump on the outskirts of the city — or without gunfights between the security forces and the guerrillas.

Under the terms of the state of siege now in force the armed forces and the police have been given virtually a free hand to eliminate the guerrillas. Their efforts are backed by the clandestine right-wing organization Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance (AAA) with whom they are widely believed to work in close liaison.

The AAA has taken the lead in threatening foreign reporters, including The Times and Le Monde correspondents in Buenos Aires, and local journalists with death if they do not leave the country and cease writing about Argentina's politics.

Ranged against the security forces are the various guerrilla groups of which the most highly organized is the People's Revolutionary Army (ERP). The government claims that the ERP can count on no more than 200 active guerrillas, but even if this figure were true it leaves out of account some thousands of supporters organized to protect and hide them. Through its continuing campaign of kidnapping notables for ransom it has collected tens of millions of dollars with which to finance its activities.

Ideologically distinct from the ERP but maintaining co-operative relations with it are the Peronist groups which have renounced any allegiance to the increasingly conservative government of General Peron's widow, Maria Estela "Isabelita." The Peronist Armed Forces (PAR) were, for instance, charged earlier this month with plotting the death of the governor of the province of Cordoba, the centre of Argentina's giant motor industry, and of his police chief.

The next few months will probably be the most crucial in the struggle between Left and Right. Since the victory of Fidel Castro's forces in 1959 in very special circumstances against a demoralized and unpopular dictatorship, no guerrilla organization has been able to win political power against the well-organized and well - equipped forces of a Latin American establishment.

The ERP and its Peronist guerrilla allies have yet to persuade the mass of the working class, tightly organized in unions dominated by pro-government leaders, that they should join in a frontal attack on the government and the oligarchy in the cause of socialism.

The guerrillas also have to face the opposition of orthodox Muscovite Communists. The Argentine Communist Party, though it is not very strong or influential, has thrown its weight against guerrilla "adventurism." The Soviet government, very anxious to step up trade with Argentina, has just invited Isabelita to make a state visit to Moscow.

In the guerrillas' favor however is the fact that millions of Argentines are uneasy about the sharp turn to the right taken by Isabelita since the death of her husband, principally under the influence of Jose Lopez Rega, the minister of social welfare, author of a dozen books on astrology and General Peron's former private secretary.

Behind the chaotic political facade the fantastic natural wealth of Argentina keeps the majority of the population contentedly well fed with cheap meat, cereals and wine. With Argentina nearly self-sufficient in oil, nature also gives the government a comfortable balance of trade surplus as the world bids up prices of Argentine beef and wheat.

To get housing hustling

By PAUL HELLYER from Ottawa

From his point of view, Hon. Barney Danson has been given the responsibility for housing and urban affairs at the worst possible time in several years. Housing starts which have been running at about 250,000 annually have fallen off dramatically this past year.

Wholesale layoffs have taken place in the lumber, building supply and building industries. This slow-down is beginning to have ripple effects on the whole economy.

★ ★ ★

The present unstable situation is largely a direct result of inflation. Interest rates are so high that many people can't afford the carrying charges on mortgages. So they just aren't buying new homes at the same rate as in previous years. Young people find themselves in a much worse position than their parents faced 20 years ago. In the 1950s, a working man could aspire to own a home of his own. But today that is out of the question for many.

The quality of life is deteriorating insofar as housing is concerned and the government, aware of the retrograde trend largely of its own making, has to do something about it.

To this end, Mr. Danson is introducing further amendments to the National Housing Act in the hope of reversing or at least slowing the trend. The amendments will allow Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the chartered banks to loan more money for housing and home improvements that was previously authorized. Federal grants will be available for storm sewers where they are needed to open up new residential areas. Subsidies will be available to cover one-half the cost of preparing regional sewage plans. CMHC will be authorized to acquire and lease land to non-profit and co-operative housing corporations and service groups and to subsidize private rental projects etc.

The main proposal, however, is to extend the assisted Home Ownership Plan (AHOP) to people who get private insured loans under the National Housing Act from their bank, insurance or trust company. This plan which is essentially an interest subsidization program, is only available for people with modest income and for modestly priced new homes. In Toronto, for example, the income range is $11,023 to $17,686.

The main difficulty with the plan, which has worked quite well with loans granted directly by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, is its complexity. (In support of this claim, I might say that the information officer at CMHC thought it was too complicated a plan for her to explain to me on the telephone). Each application has to be treated individually on its merits. Statements of income have to be made. Certification that the house to be purchased is not too expensive has to be given. In effect, it is another bureaucratic nightmare to add to those that increasingly rob us of our equanimity. The program, in its present form, is not an acceptable long-term solution.

The best solution, of course, would be to control inflation. In that case, interest rates would fall naturally to 5 or 6 per cent for residential mortgages. But controlling inflation involves the re-establishment of some arithmetic relationship between wages, prices, profits and productivity. The government's proposals for wage increases for MPs and judges indicate that they have no intention of taking the problem seriously and, by inference at least, that they don't expect anyone else to take the problem seriously. Under these rather depressing circumstances, a new, simpler massive scheme to get the cost of shelter down should be considered.

The technique most likely to succeed would be to use the tax system to get mortgage interest rates down. This could take a form similar to the scheme in the U.S. where the interest on certain municipal bonds is tax free. Consequently the rate is much lower than market rates.

Banks and insurance companies could make mortgage loans at slightly more than half the present rate — perhaps about 6½ to 7 per cent — with the same net return they have now.

Of course the program could not be introduced all at once without disrupting the market. The tax advantage should be passed in over a five-year period.

★ ★ ★

It would be an expensive program in the sense that it would reduce the tax revenues of governments substantially. But in compensation, the cost of housing and rents would fall dramatically from present levels. A choice in housing would soon be available to nearly everyone once again.

If the government will not tackle general inflation it should at least take a bold stroke in housing.

On the ski slopes

A cold wind blowing

From the Winnipeg Free Press

Conan Doyle began it all with Professor Moriarty and the Reichenback Falls. Sheikh Yamam and the Shah of Iran have now ended it. The enduring British affection for Switzerland, that is, and the more recent wintersports craze.

After the Second World War that left hundreds of thousands of ex-servicemen with a yen for a foreign holiday, the British wintersports industry enjoyed an unprecedented growth of about 10 per cent each year. But it's all over now. Slumpflation has reduced bookings on the European ski slopes by about 20 per cent and some 200,000 Britons will be spending the winter at home.

In Switzerland, the number of hotel bookings has fallen by 36 per cent below that of the halcyon days of the 1960s. Austria, which used to be cheap, is no longer so and the hotels are empty. In Italy, despite the drastic fall in the value of the lire, extravagant wage settlements have pushed hotel prices beyond reasonable limits. Hotels that provide service are too expensive. Cheap resorts are unsatisfactory.

The British are not alone in cutting down on their winter holidays. The Germans, worried about inflation and the possibility of a slump, have been stuffing their money into stockings and staying home. In France, a number of property developers in wintersports resorts have had their fingers badly burned.

The British skiing enthusiasts, however, do not give up. There are now 70 artificial ski slopes in Britain and "grass skiing" is catching on. It's the poor man's winter sport, as somebody described it.

★ ★ ★

With the British, Germans and French staying home, and even the Japanese thin on the snow-covered peaks, the Alpine resorts are going all out to cater to the oil sheikhs. Complete with their retinues and helicopters, the oil magnates have now replaced the British milords, who in times gone by used to populate Switzerland's plush resorts. The wheel has turned full circle. The people's fun is over. It's back to the rich.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

In your opinion...

'Hedge to inflation' widens income gap

There seems to be a popular fallacy abroad which says that yearly increases in incomes of between 15 and 20 per cent are not only inevitable, but reasonable. The yardstick is the increase in the consumer price index — plus a little extra for comforts sake.

So long as organized employees enjoy this annual "hedge to inflation", inflation will not worry them in the least, generally speaking, and they will continue to feel that they have "never had it so good".

Perhaps a few figures will show what such increases will result in over a 10-year period, and what widening disparities of income they will create at an accelerating speed:

At the start of the 10-year cycle, A has an annual income of $5,000; B has $20,000. The difference is $15,000.

After 10 annual increases of 15 per cent, A's income has reached $20,228. p.a.; B's has gone to $80,912. The disparity between the two is now $60,684! Everything has multiplied over four times.

* * *

To "offset inflation", A now gets $15,228. more per annum; B has been compensated with $60,912 more annually. His "hedge" has grown considerably!

From this picture we can draw some fairly obvious conclusions:

● If the present trend in annual increases continues at all levels of income, the economy is hardly likely to survive the 10-year cycle projected. Such percentages are dangerously inflationary.

* * *

● Everything on a percentage basis favors those who have the least need of the advantage.

● Inflation cannot be handled by catering to it with "hedges." The pains of the malady must be felt, and cures found and applied. They must be applied where they injure least — in the middle and upper income brackets where the dubious advantages of inflation have been enjoyed the most.

* * *

● This country, like others, has the choice of control, or collapse of the economy.

If we settle for controls, some further suggestions may be worthy of consideration.

So far, all suggestions that I know of have stuck with percentages. Perhaps that is habitual with 'have' people, since percentages always give them the advantage!

* * *

Such controls would require the minimum earner to be penalized while those at the top would still enjoy a comfortable increase. Consequently, one suggestion would be that controls came in terms of dollar amounts, not percentages.

Suppose, for instance, that the federal government had the realism and courage to introduce (as well as price and profit controls) a salary-wage control which permitted a maximum of $1,000 increase per annum to any employee.

Such a control would be the simplest and fairest possible, assuming that the maximum increase would be obligatory at lower levels, including pensioners.

* * *

Calculations for hourly, daily, etc. rates of increase permissible would require the application of only one yardstick. All could receive the same "hedge"; those at the middle and upper levels would still enjoy their advantages. The main thing is, the percentage spiral would be checked.

In line with the above, it should be recognized that the consumer price index is only concerned with, and confined to, the basic necessities of life.

Surely, reference to it is only applicable where provision of these, due to price increases, is in jeopardy. To apply the index as a lever in demanding more income at the affluent levels is a tactic which should be recognized also for what it is.

In other words, Mr. Editor, what we need is a public which is taking inflation seriously, studying it intelligently, and which will insist that our governments do the same.

Callous commuter killed pet, drove on

About 7:45 a.m. on Jan. 2 we received a belated New Year's gift at the edge of our property from an anonymous driver. We would like to acknowledge this present this way as it must be the only means of contacting the donor.

The gift was the body of our six-year-old tabby, Jinx, limp, still warm, her neck smashed. Two years ago we brought her from Ontario with another family pet and chose what we thought was a quiet street where both would be safe from traffic.

On a warm night last fall we were on the front porch and saw Jinx tossed many feet in the air as a speeding, careening driver rounded the nearby corner. The car travelled so fast we were unable to get the number. The bumper tore open her chin and the skill of a veterinarian saved her life that time.

I'm pretty sure the person we have to thank for our New Year's gift lives in the Greenlands-Ebony-Lexington area of Gordon Head to use this route going to the city and that he must leave for work between 7 and 7:45 a.m.

Along with many drivers on our so-called quiet street at his hour he is always in a hurry. How else could he strike an animal out for her morning walk and not take the time to ring a door bell and discover the owner of his victim.

In thanking you for this gift Mr. Anonymous Donor we also wish to send a warning. The houses on Greenlands Road contain many young children. Should you strike one of them it would be more difficult to conceal your identity. In fact your action would be well publicized on a different page of this paper.

Murder of policemen warrants death penalty

"Capital punishment should be retained, particularly for the murder of police officers and prison staff members."

This short message should be sent by all concerned Canadians to their member of parliament and to Solicitor General Warren Allmand, both care of Parliament Buildings, Ottawa, Ontario.

Our country's police are not superior citizens, but their function of preserving law and order is essential to the everyday safety and well-being of Canadians, old and young alike. Let us approve no law which would discourage people from and prison guards are entitled. True, it will not act as a deman's attitude towards his duties.

Capital punishment is a protection to which all policemen and prison guards are entitled. Ture, it will not act as a deterrent to every potential murderer, but if it's a factor in saving even a few lives, then it proves itself worthwhile.

Our courts give full and ample protection to every accused, through the presumption of innocence until guilt is proven beyond a reasonable doubt; and excellent defences are available. But if guilt is established in the killing of a policeman, capital punishment of the convicted should be mandatory.

The current emphasis on rehabilitation is admirable and worthy, but as mature adults we would be unrealistic to suppose that all criminals can be rehabilitated. It simply is not true. Not everyone is a nice guy. "I will die" is the only meaningful language to the incorrigible and it could well prevent a premeditated murder.

It's time we shifted some of the emphasis from the criminal to the public and to the victim and his or her family. Ask yourself, Mr. Allmand, if your comment "Hanging won't aid anyone" would have been any different if your son or daughter had been kidnapped in New Brunswick, or if the murdered policemen were members of your family.

We are all facing times when our sense of values should be examined. We cannot afford to be apathetic. The issue of capital punishment is being examined now and it is our democratic responsibility to make our thoughts known on such important legislation. Who knows when it might affect us personally? Surely the preservation of the lives of Canadians and Canadian life deserves our immediate attention.

Visitors shown kindness

Allow me to use your paper to express my appreciation for the kindness shown to my husband and me during our recent visit to Victoria.

We arrived in your city on the Thursday before Christmas during an especially heavy rain storm. Because of the poor visibility and our lack of knowledge of the city we lost our way.

A young gentleman noticing our confusion got out of his car in the pouring rain and came over to direct us. He then stopped at the first red light, got out of the car again and told us to follow him and he would take us to our motel, which he did.

He drove away before we could express our appreciation. We don't know who he is, but he is an example of some of our fine young people we hear so little about.

A happy New Year to all, especially to all your citizens who take time to help others.

One MP sets example

Congratulations to Leonard Jones (Independent) of Moncton, N.B., who has stated that members of parliament are not entitled to an increase in pay, especially as they knew last July what their salary was.

Considering that these members now receive free air transportation, long distance telephone service, postage, stationery, printing and mailing service, plus subsidized meals and haircuts and $6000 for an office in their constituency, plus $26,000 salary ($8000 of which is tax-free), plus a lucrative unique pension after six years of feeding at the public trough — it is about time that we had one member state whose nest was being feathered with that proposed salary increase rectroactive to July 10, 1974.

It is also about time that Alf Hales and the auditor general drafted a job description and position specification for members of parliament with the salary directly related to what is actually achieved.

Having drafted these position specifications these positions would be put out to competition for a two or three year tenure thus we could do away with this election farce dividing and conning the public in order to give 264 greedy people an unjustifiable steal.

When will the local representatives invite the public to an open meeting to justify their proposed increase?

Never — because they do not have the integrity of Leonard Jones.

Jaw-jaw preferred to war-war over oil

By JOSEPH KRAFT from Washington

Why doesn't the United States apply force, or at least the "credible threat of force," top safeguard vital oil interests in the Near East? Because it has far better ways to assure its vital interest in oil.

At the moment the supply picture is excellent. Most industrial countries have already filled their storage facilities to the brim. Tankers loaded with crude are idling in harbors.

There is only one step that would yield a new oil shortage. That is the same step which led to the embargo of last year — an outbreak of war. So on the simplest level, the prima facie American interest is to avoid more fighting in the Near East.

That interest explains — and justifies — the extreme lengths to which Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has gone in trying to work out a settlement between Israel and its neighbors. In the light of Egypt's refusal of Soviet aid terms and the cancellation of Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev's projected visit to Cairo, those peace efforts have taken a new lease on life. Certainly, there is absolutely no percentage in upsetting the whole applecart by resort to force or the threat of force.

The price picture, of course, is not satisfactory. The fourfold increase in the cost of oil forced by the OPEC countries in 1973 played a major role in the inflation of early 1974. Now the outflow of purchasing power caused by the rise in oil bills has brought about in North America, western Europe and Japan a major recession.

Recycling best way

Far worse has happened to the poorest countries of South Asia — notably India and Bangladesh — which face starvation and bankruptcy because of the higher cost of oil and food imports. And the worst is yet to come.

But Hollis Chenery of the World Bank, writing in the current issue of Foreign Affairs, shows that by far the best course would be for the industrialized countries to maintain full economic growth by borrowing back from the oil-exporting countries all the excess funds accumulated.

Chenery calculates the total amount transferred would be less than the amount transferred from the United States to Western Europe under the Marshall Plan.

It so happens that the main oil-exporting countries — Saudi Arabia and Iran — have both called for a dialogue between consumers and producers on the whole issue of oil and the international economy.

But such a dialogue can take place only in the context of cooperation. The first whiff of American intervention would probably force the ouster of the Shah of Iran and the King of Saudi Arabia — the two ruler most friendly to the United States these two countries are ever likely to have.

Since time is working for the U.S., since new sources of oil are rapidly coming onstream, since the pinch will be over in a couple of years, jaw-jaw makes infinitely more sense than war-war.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market Tuesday pushed its year-end rally further into 1975 with prices closing higher for the eighth straight session. Trading was moderate.

The market overcame an early bout of profit-taking and advanced steadily from mid-session.

The industrial index closed up 1.51 to 162.06, highest since Nov. 15, after dropping almost half a point in morning trading. The index has gained more than eight points in a rally which began Christmas Eve.

One factor contributing to the recent rise is the reinvestment of year-end interest and dividend payments. The New York market, often a major influence on Toronto prices, has also been stronger due, in part, to the recent reduction by the Federal Reserve in its discount rate. This may signal declines in other interest rates, analysts say.

Canada's supply assured

Venezuela's still willing

CARACAS (AP) — Venezuela is willing to continue supplying Canada with petroleum after the country's foreign-run oil industry is nationalized this year, a high-ranking government official said Tuesday.

The administration of President Carlos Andres Perez has said the country's average 3-million-barrel-a-day oil industry, currently operated by 19 foreign oil firms, will be nationalized this year.

Canada's energy minister, Donald Macdonald, who arrived here Monday night on an official week-long visit, has opened talks with government officials regarding his country's future oil imports from Venezuela.

About 44 per cent of Canada's oil imports come from Venezuela.

Canada and the United States are the biggest purchasers of oil from Venezuela, a founding member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"We want to be sure of supplies from Venezuela after the country's oil industry is nationalized," said a Canadian embassy spokesman of Macdonald's visit. "We do not want to get a rougher deal than others."

"We are willing to continue supplying Canada with oil. But it also would be interesting to hear the Canadian minister's position," said a Venezuelan mines and hydrocarbons ministry spokesman.

Venezuela currently exports approximately 300,000 barrels a day of petroleum to Canada and some 1.2 million barrels a day to the U.S.

The Canadian Embassy spokesman also said that Macdonald will discuss "the all-important question of oil prices" with the Venezuelan government "especially now that a new oil tax hike is under consideration."

The government, it was reported, is studying the possibility of increasing foreign oil companies' income tax payments this month by more than $1 on each barrel of oil.

Venezuela's oil tax reference price — the base on which the foreign oil companies' income tax payments and royalty charges are calculated — currently averages $14.43 a barrel.

Last October, the government increased the flat income tax rate per barrel to 63.5 per cent — a 3.5-per-cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974 — raising the companies' income tax payments to an average of $9.06 a barrel.

The embassy spokesman said Macdonald's talks with Venezuelan officials also will deal with the proposed creation of a Canadian state oil company.

He confirmed reports that Macdonald plans to present Parliament this spring with a draft bill which would provide for the formation of a national petroleum company to be called Petro-Canada.

The bill would authorize the Canadian government to buy petroleum directly from another country, passing over petroleum companies, if such purchases would mean lower prices for consumers, it has been reported.

Once foreign oil holdings in Venezuela are nationalized, the government may sell its oil to other countries on a state-to-state basis, some observers say.

U.S. bill queried

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger will shortly ask Congress to remove what he called inequities in the new trade bill which prohibits the United States from granting low tariff terms to certain oil-exporting countries, the state department said Tuesday.

Two countries cited by department spokesman Robert Anderson as being affected by the inequities are Ecuador and Venezuela.

The announcement came following a decision by the two countries to ask for a special session of the Organization of American States (OAS) to discuss what they called the trade bill's "economic aggression."

The trade bill grants low tariff status to developing countries, but not if the countries are members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), the Arab-led group which moved to boycott oil shipments to the United States last year following the Arab-Israeli war.

As an example of the inequities, Anderson cited the case of Ecuador, which is prohibited under the trade bill from receiving the concessions because it belongs to OPEC, although it did not join the oil boycott. Venezuela did not join the boycott either, but it did take a lead in forcing up oil prices.

Car cuts coming

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is introducing cash discounts of up to $400 for U.S. customers in the first major price reduction in the auto industry during the current sag in car sales. No similar announcement has been forthcoming for Canadians.

The firm told a meeting of car dealers Tuesday that it will kick off an unprecedented $5-million promotional campaign on television Sunday during the Super Bowl football game. The campaign, called a Car Clearance Carnival, will feature discounts on a different car each week. It also includes light trucks and vans.

The Ford Motor Co. is also expected to react with a plan soon to counter sagging sales.

Auto firms are viewed as preferring discount schemes to cuts in sticker prices for several reasons, among them that base price cuts might be embarrassing to rescind if they didn't stimulate sales and impossible to rescind should price controls be put into effect.

Crux term stays

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal Monday upheld the seven-year sentence for theft and false pretences ruled in 1971 against former Commonwealth Trust Co. President A. G. Duncan Crux.

Crux, 68, a lawyer, was charged with using $715,000 in securities of Eastpoint Holdings Ltd. in 1968 in a manner not authorized by Eastpoint.

Petrodollars

Recycle approved

LONDON (AP) — Finance ministers from the European Economic Community (EEC) reached agreement Tuesday on a recycling plan for petrodollars to be operated by the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

The amount involved will range from $10 billion to $12 billion during 1975.

Earlier, Denis Healey, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, and H. J. Witteveen, managing-director of the IMF, had proposed amounts up to $25 billion for the recycling fund.

However, an EEC official indicated that such a large amount would not be needed this year.

A delegate said that the ministers had no objection to a recycling plan proposed by Henry Kissinger, U.S. State Secretary, but the delegate said the U.S. plan needed further study.

Sources said that as the meeting continued, the ministers would probably recommend that IMF quotas be increased 30 to 35 per cent to boost the fund's lending ability. The source said that the quotas of the oil-producing countries would be doubled under the EEC finance minister's proposal.

In any case, the EEC proposals will not be acted on until an IMF meeting in Washington next week.

Got your RHOSP yet?

You've now got less than 60 days to get one.

Why would you want one? The initials stand for the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan and you likely would want one if you haven't owned a home and hope to fufil that ambition one day.

The RHOSP came at us twice in 1974 and still hasn't come to roost in the Canadian statutes. Finance Minister Turner brought it out in his May budget and again in the November re-run. The public loved it both times but has been frustrated to date by being unable to take part as it isn't law yet.

Under the plan, you and your working spouse could each put aside $1,000 in a registered plan every year up to a total of 10 years. If both worked and contributed the maximum you could have a $20,000 nest egg to build or buy that dream castle.

The saving aspect surfaces at income tax time each spring as you can each deduct that $1,000 per annum on your income tax forms. Then as a special bonus, you won't have to pay tax on the matured amount so long as you buy the house (or its furnishings) within 60 days of the plan's maturity.

Under the Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP), you can deduct up to $4,000 per year depending on your circumstances but you must pay tax on your payout after retirement.

Trust companies, banks, and mutual funds can sell RHOSPs — eventually. Most of them have tentative plans all worked out but can't lash out with the details until the thing gets through Parliament — and it doesn't sit again until Jan. 22.

Which all means that the RHOSP won't draw its first breath until sometime in February and the deadline for 1974 tax application for RHOSPs and RRSPs is Feb. 28.

Perhaps Ottawa in its wisdom will extend the deadline for this attractive means of saving. But remember, this is the same government that introduced a motion to increase MP salaries and allowances in a wavering economy.

□

Residents of the United States are just now getting their first word on IRA. He's their equivalent of RRSP and at first glance looks like a rather poor relation.

The U.S. government has just passed the 1974 Pension Reform Act and out of it came the Income Retirement Account or IRA.

Under IRA, the wage earner who isn't in a pension plan or one who is self-employed can put aside $1,500 a year and get basically the same tax shelter as we do in Canada.

Owners of small businesses can now put away $7,500 a year, up from $2,500, but they must also put something aside or their employees in order to qualify. An owner of such a business, however, can also elect to go for the $1,500 IRA plan and be under no obligation to his workers.

And like our RHOSPs, the full details haven't been worked out and government officials expect that they won't be until late this year.

Chile's inflation drops sharply

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Inflation in Chile last year reached 375.9 per cent, the national institute of statistics announced Monday. It said the 1974 figure represented a drop from the world record 508.1 per cent inflationary rate Chile experienced in 1973.

Policing ideas 'rather lousy'

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Tuesday the latest federal government proposals for RCMP policing of B.C. are considered "rather lousy" by the provincial government.

Macdonald was commenting on reports from Kelowna Monday night quoting him as saying that if the province couldn't reach agreement with the RCMP he would advocate the establishment of a provincial police force.

"That isn't quite what I said," Macdonald stated. "What I did say was that obviously the province isn't going to be left in the lurch in terms of police service. But I went on to say that even the present offer of the federal government, which we consider is rather lousy in terms of RCMP financing, would still see us able to offer municipalities the choice between their own police forces and the RCMP."

The attorney-general added that in his opinion the RCMP had done marvellous work in local communities.

Macdonald said he was not against a provincial police force as such but stressed that he favored a mix of municipal and RCMP forces.

"There's nothing wrong with provincial police forces," he said, "but I prefer the mix, you know. I think it's good that the province leave that choice at the local level, and I think that the financial incentive has got to be there.

"I think it is good to have a tie-in with a national police force, bringing in the national experience, and the national training schools which not only train RCMP recruits but also help with the training of municipal policemen."

Macdonald said RCMP training facilities at Naden as well as at Regina are available to local police forces.

But, the attorney-general said, in addition to arguing with Ottawa over costs, the province was also fighting for more policemen.

"Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has cut back on the original formula by 10 percentage points in his present offer, but I think that should be improved," Macdonald said. "I believe we should have better police services and also more policemen in B.C.

"I think the police have a new role in present society. They are not just there to catch crooks, they are also looking at social problems.

"Increasingly we are training policemen to prevent people from being unnecessarily dragged into the criminal justice system and damaged, perhaps even turned into criminals."

At present there are 1,196 RCMP officers on service in B.C. Their total budget is $14.6 million for the current year.

Macdonald said the complement of RCMP officers is 30 or 40 below desired strength.

"We signed up and agreed to pay for an additional 89 RCMP officers, but during 1974 they couldn't produce trained bodies to fulfil our extra request," Macdonald said. "At that time we were 70 or 80 men short throughout the province and we were short for about six months. I went down to Ottawa to discuss it with Allmand and he did improve the situation, but we are still running short by between 30 and 40 men."

Can any court hear case?

Jurisdiction challenged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Court of Appeal will be asked to determine whether supreme court has the jurisdiction to hear charges against two men who are in custody on drug charges.

Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson approved the procedure in supreme court Tuesday in a habeas corpus application brought in supreme court by lawyer Larry Hill on behalf of Jack Clinton McGrath and Willy Yip.

McGrath, Yip and others are to be tried before a judge and jury later this month as a result of direct indictments brought by the solicitor-general of Canada in a procedure that bypassed the normal preliminary hearing procedure.

Hill challenged the right of authorities to hold the two men. He contended that because of the direct indictment procedure there is no charge against them now and claimed that the assize court hearing cannot proceed in their case because it has no jurisdiction over them.

C. R. Landers opposed the move for the crown. He claimed the assize court, the criminal division of B.C. Supreme Court, has jurisdiction.

Hill and Landers conceded that the provincial court, where the charges began, had jurisdiction over the two men but lost it when the solicitor-general took the case from the provincial court system and allocated it to the supreme court without the need for a preliminary hearing.

Landers maintained that the jurisdiction properly passed into supreme court at the moment when the solicitor-general signed the indictment documents involved in the charge and when those documents were deposited at B.C. Supreme Court registry here.

Landers contended that Criminal Code of Canada provisions support this.

Hill said that supreme court never had the jurisdiction it needs to proceed with the case against the two men.

He maintained that when the two men and others were brought before Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz in supreme court Nov. 15 for the setting of trial dates the indictment against them was never read and was therefore never "preferred."

Hill contended the indictment must be preferred to the accused before it takes effect and, since it wasn't, there is in fact no charge against the two men and they cannot be held.

Skyscraper aerialist hurt in fall

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI)—French aerialist Philippe Petit, who astounded New York City by wirewalking between the towers of the World Trade Center, fell 25 feet to the floor of the Bayfront Centre on Tuesday while practising for his debut with Ringling Bros. and Barnum Bailey Circus.

Petit was rushed to Bayfront Medical Centre and Kenneth Feld, vice president of the circus, said he was undergoing exploratory surgery Tuesday night to determine the extent of possible internal injuries. Feld said Petit was listed in "guarded" condition.

The accident occurred at the finale of Petit's act when he was walking down a slanted wire.

Witnesses said the aerialist appeared to have landed on his right side and suffered injuries to either his hip or pelvis. He was conscious when he left the arena. There was no indication of broken limbs.

"Evidently he slipped, grabbed on to the wire with one hand and let go when he got a rope burn," Feld said.

250 buses asked, 80 are delivered

Only 80 new buses were delivered in British Columbia in 1974 of the 250 ordered by the government for expansion of transit services.

The municipal affairs department said Tuesday production problems have delayed delivery of other buses on order but the 80 coaches delivered are in service.

A spokesman for the Transit Services Bureau said the new buses are 40 feet long, five feet longer than the older version giving them larger carrying capacity.

Vancouver Island Coach Lines has 15 new highway motor coaches to service runs on the Island and eventually to increase frequency of bus service.

Pacific Stage Lines has received 15 of 25 new highway motor coaches ordered to replace older buses on the Vancouver, Victoria run and to provide new services to suburban areas on the Lower Mainland, the spokesman said.

Sixty fastbuses for the Victoria and Vancouver areas and 50 trolley and 50 diesel buses for the city of Vancouver are still to be delivered.

Another 30 city buses already delivered will be used to provide new services in interior locations but are now being used in Vancouver until buses scheduled for use in the city are delivered.

Saanich resident killed in mishap

A 27-year-old Saanich man was killed Sunday in a snowmobile accident near Ranfurly, Alta., RCMP in the tiny farming community reported Tuesday.

A Ranfurly RCMP spokesman identified the victim as Arthur Poulin, of 389 Obed, who was killed when he was thrown from his snowmobile and struck a fence post.

The accident occurred at about 8 p.m., the police spokesman said, on Poulin's brother's farm, about 80 miles east of Edmonton.

Born in the Ranfurly district, Poulin was visiting his family on holidays there, the spokesman said.

His wife and two children are remaining in the area, where the funeral will likely be held. No inquest or inquiry into the death has been ordered, the spokesman added.

Hospital shuts its 'emergency'

BURNABY (CP) — Overcrowding forced the emergency department of Burnaby General Hospital to remain closed Tuesday for the fifth consecutive day.

Dr. H. W. Zimmerman, chief of the medical staff, said influenza is partly responsible for the demand for hospital treatment.

"We have had many older people admitted with pneumonia because of flu," he said.

Zimmerman said all hospital beds were filled, except for some in maternity and pediatric, and two stretchers kept available at all times because of regulations.

Several operations have been postponed, the doctor said.

He said some patients had been treated at the emergency department in the past few days.

"People coming in with cuts will obviously be sewn up," Zimmerman said "and if somebody is in such acute condition his life is in danger, we won't send him away. But what we do with him is a real problem."

He said patients who could be moved were being sent to other hospitals and ambulances had been notified of the closure.

Burnaby General has started expansion projects three times since 1964. Twice plans were cancelled because of changed government financing. It is expected to take three years before the hospital expands from its 237 acute beds to the proposed 500.

Next games: Tonight — Brandon at VICTORIA; Flin Flon at Lethbridge.

By STAN COOPER

Brandon Wheat Kings have Finnish-sensation Marcus Mattsson on their negotiation list but the goalkeeping star of the recent World Junior Hockey tournament might have difficulty earning a starting berth with the Western Canada Hockey League club.

Brandon coach Norm Johnson, who saw Mattsson play two games of the six-country tournament in Brandon, said the Finnish youth expressed interest in playing for the Wheat Kings and, if education arrangements can be made, could be with the team next season.

"Mattsson would be right in place in this league," Johnson said prior to Tuesday's game with Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena, "but he would have to earn a position as we've got two good goalkeepers in Glen Hanlon and Blaine Peterson."

Following Hanlon's exceptional performance against the Cougars, Mattsson may indeed have a tough challenge.

The 17-year-old rookie turned in one of the finest efforts seen at Memorial Arena in a long time, blocking 52 shots. He allowed four goals but wasn't to be faulted on any of them as Cougars completely dominated play in taking a 4-1 victory.

The lanky redhead was at his best in the second period, when he stopped 22 straight shots and saw his teammates climb to within a goal.

Hanlon, who will likely get the call again tonight when the teams play a return engagement at Memorial Arena, had little support from his teammates, who managed only 14 shots on the Victoria net.

The Brandon netminder stopped Peter Morris on a first-minute breakaway and held the Western Division leaders off the scoreboard until late in the first period.

Greg Miazga and Rick Peter scored 85 seconds apart and Hanlon was unbeatable until Jim Gustafson tallied on a powerplay early in the third period and Danny Lucas capped the scoring with about 11 minutes to play.

Doug Murray got the Brandon goal, converting a pass from Rick Blight and Mike Bradbury while Wheat Kings held a man advantage.

Cougar-netminder Lloyd Saar had little difficulty with the other Brtndon shots, many of which came from well out.

Morris was the unluckiest of Cougar shooters, seeing four other labelled shots plucked out of the air by the ever-alert Hanlon. The hard-working leftwinger contributed an assist on Lucas' goal and played a fine, two-way game as a penalty-killer.

Rookie-Cougar Murray Good, picked up from the Wheat Kings on a three-game trial basis this week, assisted on Gustafson's goal and saw duty in place of injured Curt Fraser.

The five-foot-11, 180-pound rightwinger was offered to the Cats on a "make good basis and will return to the Wheat Kings if not signed by manager-coach Pat Ginnell.

Victoria moved the Cougars 13 points up on second-place Kamloops Chiefs, both idle Tuesday.

In other games, Flin Flon Bombers surprised Edmonton Oil Kings, 6-3, in the Alberta capital; Winnipeg Clubs edged the visiting Regina Pats, 4-3, and Saskatoon Blades posted a 5-4 win over the hapless Calgary Centennials.

At Edmonton, goalkeeper Roger Swanson stopped 50 shots in backstopping the Bombers to only their second road victory of the season.

Keily Kehoe fired three goals for Flin Flon and linemate Mark Davidson contributed four assists.

In Winnipeg, the Eastern Division-trailing Clubs scored their ninth win of the season when Larry Skinner scored a powerplay goal late in the third period to snap a 3-3 tie.

Capitals tie Bruins Seals edge Blues

Washington Capitals rose up Tuesday night against Boston Bruins and snapped a National Hockey League losing streak at nine games.

The first-season Capitals, who absorbed 10-4 and 12-1 beatings at the hands of the Bruins earlier, fought to a 3-3 deadlock with the powerful Bruins in a home game behind the goalkeeper of Ron Low, who relieved Michel Belhumeur midway through the opening period.

Low, who came in after Belhumeur pulled a muscle, came up with 31 stops while his teammates came from behind three times to gain the deadlock.

In other Tuesday games, New York Islanders downed the Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-3, in Uniondale, and California Seals extended an unbeaten streak to four games with a 3-2 win over the Blues in St. Louis.

Boston fired 44 shots at the Capitals' goaltenders while Ross Brooks in the Boston goal faced only 15 shots.

Bruins fired 21 shots on net in the opening period but could only get one by Belhumeur before he left at 10:18.

Rookie Mike Marson was the scoring star for the Capitals, who have but three wins and five ties in 41 games, scoring two goals and setting up Pete Laframboise with the tying goal early in the final period. Laframboife, who assisted on both of Marson's goals, poked the puck past the sprawled Brooks following a pileup in front of the Boston goal.

Capitals held scoring-leader Phil Esposito to one assist and defenceman Bobby Orr, second in the individual scoring list, was held off the scoresheet.

The Islanders scored three goals in the opening period and hung on for their victory.

J. P. Parise, obtained in a Sunday trade with Minnesota North Stars, picked up two assists for New York. What proved to be the winning goal was scored by Garry Howatt, who played with Victoria Cougars and Flin Flon Bombers of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Tonight's game between Vancouver and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8 and broadcast on radio station CKNW (980) starting at 5.

Roberts added to all-star cast

Victoria Cougars will have the largest representation on the Western Division team at the Western Canada Hockey League's all-star game here next week.

Five players, including rookie-defenceman Gordie Roberts, will carry the Cougar colors in the 10th annual classic, Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

Rick LaPointe, Mel Bridgman, Peter Morris and Danny Lucas of Victoria were all selected to the team last week and Detroit-native Roberts was one of seven players named Tuesday to fill out the 19-player roster.

Others are forwards Barry Smith and Brian Shmyr of New Westminster Bruins, Greg Vaydik and Barry Dean of Medicine Hat Tigers, and Brad Gassoff and Neil Lyseng of Kamloops Chiefs.

The seven additions were runners-up in the voting completed last week by coaches and general managers.

Cougar coach-manager Pat Ginnell will manage the Western Division team and Harvey Roy of Kamloops will serve as coach.

Additions to the Eastern Division squad, managed by Del Wilson of Regina Pats and coached by Jackie McLeod of Saskatoon Blades, will be named today.

Tickets for the game are available at Memorial Arena box office and tickets for the all-star banquet, to be held Monday at the Empress Hotel, can be purchased at the Cougar office in the Imperial Inn.

Quebec Nordiques and Toronto Toros continued their juggling act Tuesday in the Canadian Division of the World Hockey Association.

The Nordiques regained first place by defeating Michigan Stags, 3-2, in overtime at Detroit, while the Toros went back into second by dropping a 3-2 decision to Phoenix Roadrunners before 12,652 fans at Toronto.

Toronto led the Canadian Division through November and December but on Saturday dropped into second by losing, 3-1, to the Nordiques at Quebec. The Toros then reclaimed first by defeating the Crusaders, 4-3, Sunday at Cleveland.

The duel between the two teams for first place has proven good for both in dollars and cents. The Nordiques had a record crowd of more than 12,000 for the Saturday contest and are second in overall attendance only to the Toros, who are averaging more than 10,000 every game.

At Detroit, Serge Bernier scored his 28th goal of the season at 6:03 of the third period to send the game into overtime and Christian Bordeleau scored at 3:04 of the extra period to give Quebec the win.

Quebec netminder Richard Brodeur made 43 saves, while Gerry Desjardins stopped 34 for Michigan.

The Toros, meanwhile, were the victims of a pair of ex-Vancouver Blazers. Peter McNamee gave Phoenix the lead early in the first period and John Migneault scored the winner midway through the third period. Both players were part of a trade that sent Hugh Harris to the Blazers earlier this season.

In Tuesday's other games: Mike Walton moved into second in the goal-scoring race with his 29th goal and Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated the Cougars, 4-2, at Chicago; Indianapolis Racers handed Vancouver its third straight road defeat, beating the Blazers, 4-2; and Rich Leduc scored with 31 seconds remaining to give Cleveland Crusaders a 4-4 tie with visiting Winnipeg Jets.

In a game at San Diego, the Mariners built a 3-0 lead in the first period and then held on for a 5-3 victory over New England Whalers.

Aussie XV here for game tonight

It's summer in Australia and rugby season is still far off, so some of the down-under XVs are touring the world playing exhibition matches to keep in trim.

Victoria is fortunate enough to have one of the touring teams playing here today. The Western Suburbs of Sydney will play James Bay Athletic Association of the Victoria Union's first division at 7 p.m. at Royal Athletic Park.

The Suburbs started their five-game tour by dominating the lineouts and defeating Vancouver Trojans, 11-9, Saturday at Brockton Oval in Vancouver. Six-foot-five Bob Lemon and six-foot-seven Rich Robinson played big parts in the Australian victory.

The Australians rely heavily on kicking and hard-hitting forward play, a very different style from the Welsh and English sides often seen here.

The Suburbs will have their hands full with James Bay, which is undefeated in first division and Ellis Trophy play this season. And all but two of the JBAA players have experience against senior International competition. The exceptions are Bernie Crump, a former Vic High Titan and Jamie Attenborough, formerly of Esquimalt High Dockers.

The Suburbs other matches are in Oregon, California and Hawaii.

Blocking on punt returns among CFL changes

WASHINGTON (CP) — There will be a new look in Canadian football next season — not as drastic a new look as there might have been, but there will be changes.

For instance, there will be unlimited blocking — above the waist only — on punts and missed field-goal runbacks.

And instead of the ball coming back to the 25 on a single, it will come back to the 35-yard line to give, in the words of Hap Shouldice, chief of officials, "better field position right off the bat for the teams scored against."

As in the past, the team scored against on a field goal may take the ball on its own 35-yard line, or may kick off from that spot.

Now, there is a third option — that of having the scoring team kick off from its own 35-yard line.

There's a change, also, on the conversion.

In the past, the ball was spotted on the 10-yard line for the point-after kick attempt.

Now, the ball will be spotted on the five-yard line and the attacking club may try for a single point conversion by placement, or may go for two points by running or passing.

This was one of the more controversial rule changes approved at the annual meeting of the Canadian Football League's rules committee.

"This has been the most progressive rules meeting we've every had," Shouldice said. "There have been more changes than ever before — 16 out of 36 proposals."

Many of the changes are technical rule-book wording switches and all of them must be ratified at the league's annual meeting Feb. 20 in Toronto.

Another change is that, in the last three minutes of each half, whenever the ball changes hands, time will begin on the snap of the ball. Shoudlice predicts this will result in about four more plays in the last three minutes of each half.

Under the new rules, unnecessary roughness gives the victimized team 15 yards and — this is new — an automatic first down.

One that's going to make it tough on the officials is the new rule that says that when a player is down and in possession of the ball, indicating he has no intention of getting up, the officials shall blow the ball dead.

An old rule that is going to be enforced more stringently is that which concerns a quarterback deliberately drawing the opposing team offside.

"We hope to be able to whistle that dead before contact is made," Shouldice said.

As significant as some of the new rulings adapted are some of the proposals that were thrown out.

The Canadian game is not going to 11 players from the current 12. The fair catch is out. And the suggestion that the three points could be wiped out by a runback from the end zone following a successful field goal also was shot down.

Another proposal — that the game go from yards to metres — suffered a similar fate.

Wired Italians steal world-series show

NEW YORK (UPI)—Major-league baseball unveiled its annual world series film Tuesday, but instead of the Oakland A's and Los Angeles Dodgers, the central heroes turned out to be a pair of fast-talking Italians, Tom Lasorda and Ron Luciano.

The film ended as expected, the A's beating the Dodgers in five games behind the clutch relief pitching of Rollie Fingers, the slick fielding of second-baseman Dick Green and the timely hitting of Joe Rudi, Reggie Jackson, Ray Fosse and Sal Bando.

Interspersed in all the action, however, were the confrontations between Lasorda, the Dodgers' third base coach who was wired for sound, and Luciano, an American League umpire.

"Will you stop talking to yourself!" Luciano, unaware of the hidden mike, shouted to the ever-chattering Lasorda during the heat of action.

Later Luciano was heard to ask Lasorda what he thought of the designated hitter rule.

"I don't like it," Lasorda answered gruffly.

"Well you're going to get it because it works too well," was Luciano's unsolicited reply.

In another humorous confrontation, the colorful Luciano, umpiring at second base, turned to the Dodgers' catcher Steve Garvey who had just stolen second and shouted smiling:

"That's the cleanest steal I've ever seen—especially for a catcher!"

League meets Stag payroll

DETROIT (AP) — Tuesday was a belated payday for Michigan Stags as the World Hockey Association stepped in with cash to bail out the financially-troubled team ownership.

John Kanel of the WHA office in California flew in the money for the bi-weekly salary payments, which had been due on Jan. 1. The team payroll is believed to be about $12,500 every two weeks.

WHA president Dennis Murphy said Tuesday the league would try to save the Stags and is doing everything possible to try to locate more financial help in Detroit or elsewhere.

Kanel said every effort would be made to keep the Stags in Detroit. He said he was almost certain that the team would finish the season.

The Stags have been plagued by small crowds. The federal government has filed a $177,870 tax lien against the team and the Stags also owe money to the city for use of Cobo arena.

Veteran ref happy again

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Friday, No. 1 referee in the World Hockey Association since its inception and the highest paid hockey official in the world, has decided against retirement.

Friday submitted his resignation as the WHA's referee-in-chief two weeks ago, citing a heavy workload and prolonged periods of travel as his reasons.

However, following a meeting with Bud Poile, the league's vice-president of hockey operations, Friday, 41, agreed to continue his WHA agreement for the remainder of the season.

"We met with Bill and other officials and everything is straightened out," said Poile. "We'll ease Bill's travelling schedule and he'll fulfil his contractual obligation to us."

Indy 500 rules amended

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Curtailed practice hours, but a return to the four-day format for time trials for the Indianapolis 500-mile auto race, were announced Tuesday by Tony Hulman, president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Time trials will be held on two Saturdays and two Sundays, May 10-11 and May 17-18. Last year, the time trials were cut to two days, and the move resulted in lawsuits filed by car owners left at the starting line when the qualification runs were closed.

As was the case due to the energy crisis a year ago, the practice sessions on the 2½ mile track have been cut about 50 per cent in comparison with previous years. Practice hours will be 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., starting May 3.

This year's race is scheduled for May 25, the Sunday before Memorial Day.

Hulman said entry forms for the race classic will be mailed later this month. The 33 fastest qualifiers during the time trials will form the starting lineup for the race.

Another honor for Jenkins

FERGUSON JENKINS, already named Canada's and Ontario's 1974 male athlete of the year, was selected Texas pro athlete of the year Tuesday, edging Texas Rangers' teammates Jeff Burroughs and Mike Hargrove. Armed with his honors and information on the recent contract given Jim Hunter by New York Yankees, Jenkins meets today with Ranger general-manager Danny O'Brien to discuss his 1975 contract. Jenkins' wife has indicated that he will not accept the $145,000 reportedly offered by the Rangers . . . Minnesota Twins have offered 38-year-old veteran-slugger Harmon Killebrew a job as batting coach and pinch-hitter . . . Bill Orwig, assistant general manager of Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association has been named general manager of the rival Utah Stars . . . Minnesota Viking tackle Charles Goodrum pulled a muscle in his right leg Tuesday and may be replaced in the Super Bowl lineup by 15-year veteran Grady Alderman . . . Alain Cousineau of Quebec and Becky Dorsey of Wenham, Mass., took top honors Tuesday in the giant slalom competition in the Can-Am amateur skiing races at Killington, Vermont . . . Defenceman Rick Ley will be lost to New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association for a week with a groin injury . . .

Seven Island skaters to vie for Western Canada crowns

Seven skaters will carry Vancouver Island's hopes in the Western Canada divisional figure skating championships which get under way Thursday at Victoria Racquet Club and Memorial Arena.

The three-day championships, held for the first time last year in Edmonton, has drawn more than 100 entries from Yukon, Northwest Territories, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia and should be the highlight of Victoria's figure-skating season.

The top three from each competition qualify for the Canadian championships in Quebec City Jan. 29 to Feb. 2.

In addition, three world-class, guest skaters will be here for exhibitions during the three days of the championships.

In the group are Toller Cranston, the four-time Canadian senior titleholder, and Barbara Berezowski and David Porter, also from Toronto, the runners-up in the Canadian senior dance competition for the last three years and heir-apparents to the title left by the retired Louise and Barry Soper of Vancouver.

Cranston, who finished third at last year's world championships, is acknowledged as the finest free skater today.

The competition opens Thursday at the Racquet Club, starting at 8 a.m., and moves to the Memorial Arena starting at 7 p.m. the first night. The exhibitions will be put on following the last competition at the arena.

On Friday, competition will again get under way at 8 a.m. at the Recquet Club, but will move to the Arena at 4 p.m.

Saturday's program begins at 10 a.m. at the arena and the grand finale, the Parade of Champions, is scheduled to kick off at 8 p.m.

An all-event ticket is $8, single-event tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for pensioners and children 12 and under and $2.50 for the Parade of Champions.

Besides all the champions, the three guest skaters will also perform on Saturday night.

Islanders competing are 17-year-olds Marla Vance and Oliver Coomes of the Racquet Club in the novice pairs event, 18-year-olds Susan Anderson and Jerry Berry of RCV in the junior dance competition, Sharolyn, 16, and Ardie Sloat, 15, of the Victoria Figure Skating Club, also in the junior dance section, and 19-year-old Linda Campbell of RCV in the senior ladies singles.

All but Berry, who is from Nanaimo , are Victoria skaters.

Miss Vance and Coomes finished ninth in the nationals last year, were fourth in the B.C, sectionals and third in the Western Canada and Vancouver Island championships. Both are Grade 12 students at Mt. Douglas High School.

Miss Anderson and Berry, first-year students at University of Victoria, were second in the B.C. sectionals held recently and were 11th in the novice dance event of the 1973 Canadian championships.

The brother-sister team of Sloats, both Reynolds High School students, won the 1974 novice dance title at the Vancouver Island regional championships and took the prenovice dance title in the regionals in 1973. At the recent B.C. sectionals, they were third in the junior dance competition.

Miss Campbell, majoring in physical education, was the junior ladies champion of Nova Scotia in 1973, finishing 10th that year in the Canadian championships. She has been the 1973 and 1974 Canadian Forces ladies' open champion and finished third in the B.C. sectionals and fifth in the Western Canada divisional competitions last year in the senior class.

While the Western Canada divisional championships are being held, the Central divisionals (Manitoba, Northern Ontario, Western Ontario) and Eastern divisionals (Central Ontario, Eastern Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland) will take place at the same time in Brandon and Oshawa.

The Canadian Figure Skating Association, which holds the competitions, comprises of more than 830 figure skating clubs totalling more than 145,000 skaters.

Surgenor, Midgley cars seek California honors

Two cars from Victoria are heading for Southern California and two major races at Riverside.

Ross Surgenor of Victoria will try to qualify for the Jan. 18 Permatex 200, late-model sportsmen's race in his 1968 Ford Torino and Hershel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore., will pilot Dick Midgley's 1974 Chevelle in the Jan. 19 Winston Western 500 event for late-model stock cars.

Surgenor, making his third straight attempt in the Permatex event, will be trying to become the second Victoria driver to win the 200-mile race. Gary Kershaw won it in 1971, the only Canadian ever to win the prestigious race. Surgenor finished 15th in 1973, experiencing some mechanical problems and blew an engine in last year's qualifying run. He is scheduled to leave today for Riverside and make his qualifying run Sunday.

McGriff, who will be out for his fourth Permatex victory in his own 1969 Chevelle, will compete for one of 40 spots in the Winston Western 500, a NASCAR (National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing) event which has drawn such names as Richard Petty, five-time Grand National champion who won the race in 1969 and 1972, A. J. Foyt, the 1970 winner, Cale Yarborough, the defending champion, David Pearson and Bobby Allson, winner of the Los Angeles Times 500 race in November.

McGriff had Midgley's vehicle for the Los Angeles Times 500 but it developed mechanical troubles during practice and did not compete in the race, run at the Ontario Motor Speedway. Qualifying for the Winston Western 500 will be held on Jan. 17 and 18.

Stabler, Greene top NFL vote

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler and Mean Joe Green, Pittsburgh Steelers defensive tackle, have been named the National Football League's top players by The Associated Press.

The nation-wide panel of sports writers and broadcasters chose Stabler the offensive player of the year, and gave defensive honors to Greene based on their performances during the regular season.

Stabler, a left-hander, led the Raiders to the American Conference West Division championship. He passed for 2469 yards and a league-leading 26 touchdowns, completing 57.4 per cent of his attempts.

It was Stabler's last-minute scoring pass that gave Oakland its first-round playoff victory and eliminated defending champion Miami Dolphins. A week later, the Raiders were knocked off by Greene and the Steelers in the American Conference championship game.

Greene, long the menace of opposing quarterbacks, threw passers for losses eight times during the regular season, leading the Steelers to a league high 52 sacks. He helped Pittsburgh compile the best defensive statistics in the AFC — a yield of only 219.6 yards a game.

His selection marked the second time Greene has been named the top defensive performer. He also was chosen by the AP panel in 1972.

Cricket series has Aussies wondering about calibre

By DON WHITINGTON
Colonist—Gemini Feature Service

CANBERRA — The current Test cricket series in Australia is bringing home forcibly to many Australians that commercialism and professionalism are insidiously destroying the legendary Australian prowess at sport.

Australia certainly won the first two Test matches, but the question bothering Australians is did their team win because it was so good or because the Englishmen were so bad.

The two stars of the Australian team are the Chappell brothers of South Australia, though one of them is now playing as a professional for Queensland. There are three fast bowlers, Lillee, Thomson and Walker. There are a couple of spinners and a couple of all rounders like Doug Walters.

It is a good, evenly balanced side. It must be, to be holding its own on world standards. But how good are world standards these days? How many small boys at school aspire to be Test cricketers as they did a generation ago?

It is difficult to believe that this Australian team would have survived against the England teams of the thirties and forties, with batsmen like Hobbs and Sutcliffe, Hammond and Compton, bowlers like Tate, Hedley Verity, Alec Bedser, Larwood and Bowes.

Indeed, it is difficult to accept that this all-conquering Australian team would survive against, say, Australian teams of the thirties and forties — the Lindwall-Miller bowling combination, batsmen like Bradman, McCabe, Kippax, Ponsford, Hassett.

There should always be caution about harking back to the so-called "good old days" but when one compares the condition of the grounds, the preparation of the pitches, the almost luxury conditions for players, it is difficult to concede that today's players are as good or better than those of a generation or even a decade ago.

The bowling of Lillee, Australia's speedster, was lauded by the critics because in England's second innings in the second test at Perth his three openings overs were maidens.

There were some good balls among them, but really most of them were so wide of the mark or pitched so short that they bounced out of reach. The batsmen couldn't have scored even had he known how to.

That would not have done for the Lindwalls, the O'Reillys, the Davidsons, of Australia's golden years of cricket.

It may be over-simplifying to say this all traces back to social conditions in Australia and in England, but the theory bears examination.

If you talk to the average sportsmaster at the average Australian school — Geelong College, which produced Lindsay Hassett, Sydney Grammar, which produced Jim Burke, Waverley (Sydney) College, which produced Jack Fingleton, any of the high schools in the capital cities that produced players like Don Tallon, the prince of wicket keepers since the last war, or Bill Brown, or Sid Barnes — they will tell you that kids these days can't be bothered playing cricket.

The schools field their quota of teams all right, but they are battling to make up the numbers. Boys would rather row or swim or even play tennis or golf in summer.

And the kids who aren't being regimented for organized sport would rather be in the surf or at home watching television. In fact, more Australian children are spending more of their time watching television than in any other occupation, pastime, recreation or anti-social exercise, call it what you will.

This is not to say that the current Test series in Australia is not capturing public attention. The national broadcasting system and most of the commercial radio and television stations are giving it maximum coverage. So are the newspapers. Attendances at games are high.

Every office and household has a transistor turned on most hours of play. There are learned commentaries and post mortems, boring reports on the state of the health of England Captain Mike Denness or the condition of England opener Luckhurst's thumb.

But it all seems a bit phony, as though Australians are trying to convince themselves they really are sport made and that this game of cricket is a vital part of the national psyche.

The famous Hill on the outer of the Sydney Cricket ground, the outer ground at Perth or the lovely oval at North Adelaide, are more notable for the number of drunks at the end of the day, the number of fights, and the inane shouted advice to the players, than for any informed or intelligent comment, any really knowledgeable or dedicated analysis of or interest in the play.

The rather weedy Australian, the worker in the factory and the office and on the production line, which most Australians are these days, is having himself on, trying to kid himself he's the big sunbronzed Adonis of popular legend.

There has been talk in official fisheries circles that the 12-inch size limit on grilse may be abandoned and the simple catch limit of four salmon, any size, be enforced.

That would mean anglers would keep the first four fish they catch regardless of size. If the first four fish were eight-inch grilse that would be the fishing for the day.

On the other side of the picture there are many anglers who believe the legal size limit for salmon should be increased from 12 inches to something like 16 or even 18 inches in an effort to discourage blueback and grilse fishing.

Any change is bound to be highly controversial.

Meanwhile the size limit is 12 inches for grilse and no angler will dispute that a great many grilse are dying after being hooked and released.

Nothing sickens an angler more than to release a badly-hooked 11½-inch grilse and see it float away on the surface while gulls hover over it.

But, one of the intents of a size limit is to discourage angling for small fish. To encourage anglers to use lures that are most likely to catch the bigger salmon.

All these small fish are destined to grow up and provide many more pounds of good sports and eating salmon.

But, few sports anglers — (and for that matter commercial fishermen shake and kill thousands and thousands of immature fish each season) — are able to entirely avoid catching undersized salmon.

Because Georgia Strait chinook and coho populations are largely resident, fish of different age and sizes frequently share the same feed. Undersized fish are released so they can grow to a harvestable size.

Whether or not released chinook and coho survive and grow depends on the care the fishermen take not to injure the fish. Observing a few simple rules can help.

Ray Buckley, of the Washington department of fisheries, has written a pamphlet called How To Unhook Small Salmon.

He says scale loss is the greatest source of mortality among small salmon that are caught and released. Removal of the scales allows water to be drawn out through the skin, dehydrating the fish. Scale loss of 25 per cent can be fatal.

To reduce scale loss avoid touching the fish or letting it touch a net or boat. It is usually possible to release a small salmon without handling it, he says.

To free a fish without touching it, some form of hook releasing tool is helpful.

Buckley defines a hook releaser as any "device anglers can use to hold and invert the hook so lightly hooked salmon can be easily shaken free without touching the fish."

The most basic device is made from a coat hanger and consists simply of a piece of wire with one end looped to form a handle and the other end bent into a small U-shape.

To free a salmon using a wire hook releaser, lift the hook up with the releaser while pulling down on the leader with the other hand.

This action inverts the hook so the point is down.

A slight shake will now free a lightly hooked fish.

Some fishermen use long-nosed pliers or a gaff for the same purpose.

Don't be afraid to sacrifice your hook. At times it is best to bend down the barb or cut the hook to avoid pulling the barb through eye or gill tissue.

Sometimes it is impossible to remove the hook without handling or severely wounding the fish. A hook that is swallowed, gill-caught, or eye-caught is often better left in the fish. If the hook is not stainless steel it will soon rust away.

When a fish is caught on two hooks or on a treble hook considerable handling is often required to release it. Also the opposing tensions of compound or multiple hooks make it difficult to free the fish without tearing a great deal of tissue.

Whenever possible, fish with a single hook. Many fishermen have found a single hooks more efficient than treble hooks because the three sides of a treble hook often work contrary to one another.

One hook mooching rigs have also been found satisfactory. They tend to miss some small salmon while still performing well on more desirable ones.

Four rules allow each fisherman to help in reducing mortality of undersized and pre-season salmon: avoid handling to reduce scale loss; use a hook releaser; sacrifice your hook if it is swallowed, eye-caught or gill-caught; use one single hook.

LRB asks Teamsters to explain walkout

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Teamsters Union has asked to appear before the B.C. Labor Relations Board today in connection with the refusal of 1,100 union members to report to work at Johnston Terminals Ltd.

Ed Zimmerman, Teamsters' spokesman, said Tuesday he thought Johnston's representatives would also be at the LRB meeting.

Company officials could not be reached for comment. Johnston Terminals is B.C.'s largest trucking firm.

The union members on the Lower Mainland voted to stay off the job after 100 men on Vancouver Island and others here walked off their jobs Friday to support two members suspended and fined by the company.

Zimmerman said the suspensions end tonight, but predicted the men won't return to work Thursday.

Although the walkouts resulted directly from the suspension, the issue is associated with the union's work-to-rule campaign and overtime ban which began in December.

The campaign began after Transport Labor Relations, which represents more than 100 trucking firms, turned down the union's request for mid-contract wage adjustments.

Union officials have recommended the men return to work.

Zimmerman said Johnston drivers who work exclusively for Simpsons-Sears Ltd. are also not working and no deliveries are going out.

Maritime Museum still house hunting

City council, the kindly landlord of the Maritime Museum, has been thwarted in its attempt to find its rent-free tenants a new home.

Council last year decided to evict the museum by March 31, this year, but also to clear the way for the museum, now in Bastion Square's city-owned Law Courts, to move into the city-leased Malahat Building with provincial government financing.

But Mayor Peter Pollen told council-in-caucus Tuesday that the federal government, owner of the Malahat Building, could not make it available to the city until June.

Ald. Michael Young suggested the city charge the museum rent for each month it stays in the Law Courts after the eviction date.

Justice council ready for work

The Capital Region Justice Council is formed and ready to go public.

When the council met Tuesday night it was still defining its purposes and how to achieve them, in preparation for a public meeting next month.

The B.C. government last May passed legislation designed to involve ordinary citizens in the revamping of the justice system.

The reason for setting up the Justice Development Commission was the government's desire to "develop a justice system that is organized, has a sense of direction, a sound plan and a commitment to action."

The commission formed local groups to find out just what is wrong with the system.

The de-centralized local council, the Capital Region Justice council is made up of people like a lawyer, a nun, a police inspector, a probation officer, a social worker, a reporter, and a boys' club head.

The council will go into the public forum at 7:30 p.m. Feb 5 at the Newcombe auditorium to find out what the public considers to be the faults of the system and how to correct them.

From that and more public forums, the council will offer suggestions on how to create "a just society" to the commission, which will make recommendations to the government.

"It is appalling to realize the magnitude of the task we're taking on," said Tony Gascombe, the council's steering committee chairman, who is head of the Boys' Club of Greater Victoria.

Quebec and Nova Scotia have similar programs "but not to the depth of B.C.'s" said Don McComb, vice-chairman of all justice councils in B.C.

Woolworth in wrong in firing two women

DUNCAN — The B.C. Labor Relations Board has supported the case of two Duncan women who were illegally dismissed last summer for union activity at F. W. Woolworth Company Ltd. Both women have been ordered reinstated.

"These women were fired without ever having been told their work was unsatisfactory," said a three-member panel of the board in a written decision.

The dismissals of Enid Parkes, checkout cashier, last June 20, and Theresa Cartwright, paint department employee, last June 17, occurred in spite of Woolworth's policy that "faults or shortcomings" in work will be discussed, and employees will be dismissed for "dishonesty, insubordination, incompetence" or "serious infraction" of company rules.

The board said Mrs. Cartwright was fired after a paint salesman for an outside firm "apparently" told the store manager she was organizing a union.

Miss Parkes was fired after discussing the union with the garden department manager, the board said.

Under the Labor Code, this put the burden of proof of innocence on the store, and the board found the company violated a section of the code prohibiting discipline or discharge for union activity.

Woman bus driver starts work Monday

The woman who had to get an order from the B.C. Human Rights Commission to find a job as a bus driver for B.C. Hydro starts her new job with the company Monday.

Penny Harding said Tuesday she was "eagerly looking forward" to her first day of work next week, when she will begin a 10-day route familiarization program on the buses.

Ms. Harding is not Victoria's first woman bus driver, but she may well be the best-known.

After she had been rejected by a Hydro personnel officer last fall, she took her case to the Human Rights Commission, arguing she had been denied consideration for a job because of her sex.

The Human Rights Commission agreed with her assessment of the reasons given for her rejection and ordered Hydro to re-consider her application.

Hydro did so, then informed her she would be among the first drivers hired in 1975.

Robbery trial for two

Two Victoria men must face trial in a higher court on a joint three-count charge of armed robbery in connection wth a $1,670 holdup late Sept. 5 at the Criterion card club, 562 Yates.

Henry Frank Guiney, 42, of 304 Oswego, was committed to a higher court for trial following a preliminary hearing that ended Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court while a similar trial was ordered for Leo Arnold Baker, 24, of 885 Craigflower.

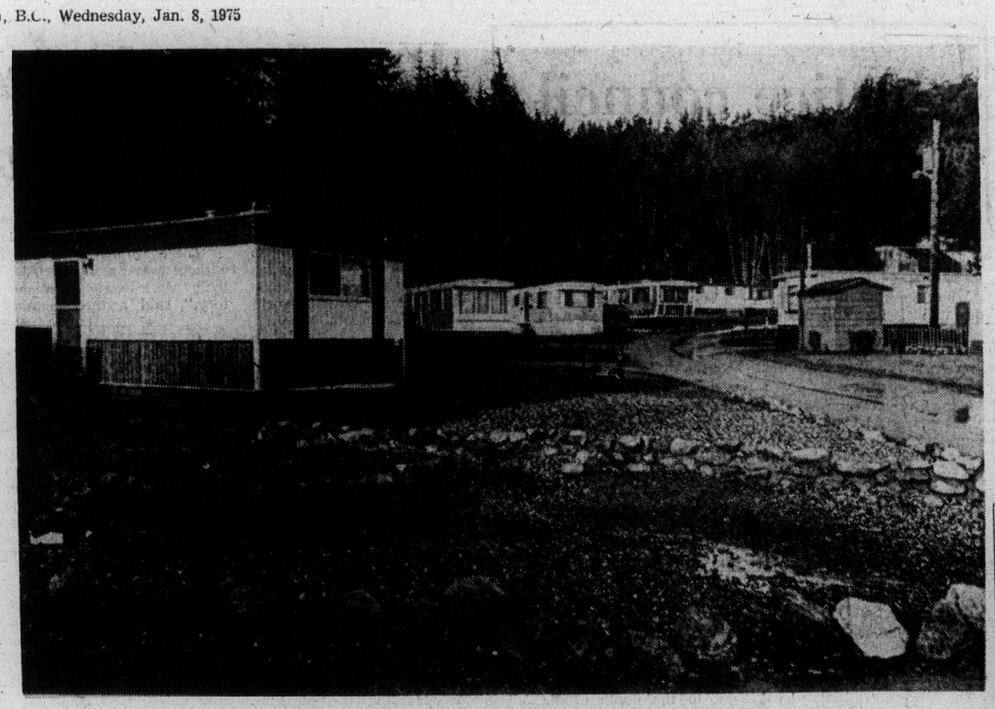
The difference in the orders was due to the fact that persons still in custody are committed for trial after such a hearing while persons out on bail are ordered to trial.

Guiney has been unable to raise bail since his arrest on the night of Sept. 5 but bail was posted for Baker last month. Bail was set originally at $15,000 for Guiney and $10,000 for Baker but these amounts were reduced in half at a November hearing in a higher court.

Publication of evidence during the hearing was prohibited by an order issued by Judge William Ostler at the request of Richard Law, lawyer for Baker. Guiney was represented by Douglas Christie.

The hearing took five court sittings spread over three days.

Police said at the time of the holdup two men wearing masks entered the club, one carrying a shotgun. One shot was fired but no one was hurt.



Park owners have promised to correct problems

Tanks don't have permits

Most oil tanks at the Hidden Valley mobile home park in Langford have been installed without a fire department permit, the Langford fire chief said Tuesday.

Al Lequesne said that although owners of the park claim most oil tanks have been installed with permits, "as far as I know, the bulk have no installation permits."

Seven of the 150 tanks in the park, on Florence Lake Road, are covered by permits, he said, because they were installed by the owner of the trailer. Wagon Train Estates, the park owner, installed the other 143 tanks and was responsible for getting permits, he explained.

Lequesne said that although an inspection Monday of oil tanks in the park revealed that almost all have "some degree of infraction" in the way they were installed, there is no resulting fire hazard.

Because the tanks are outside the trailers, "it is not a fire hazard," he said. "The worst that you're going to have is an oil spill" such as the one last week which dumped about 150 gallons of oil into nearby Florence Lake.

The spill resulted in Monday's inspection of the park.

Lequesne said he has been assured by the park owners that "we'll get all the problems corrected and in short order."

Keith Van Eyk, manager of the park, said Tuesday that only about 40 tanks — all installed in the last six months — don't have permits.

Streakers ball ends in bust

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Five persons face obscene live conduct charges as a result of an incident when two Boise policemen making a routine bar check found about a dozen naked persons sitting around the bar at a private party.

Police said they were unable to arrest the others because they ran out of handcuffs.

Policemen Arnold Hagmann and Larry Jones said the nude persons at the bar said they were attending a "streakers ball." Governor Cecil Andrus' inaugural ball was being held across town at the time the five men were arrested.

The two officers said when four of the nude men initially arrested began putting on their clothes, other persons in the bar protested and began to take their clothes off.

One of the protesters was arrested when he doffed his clothes.

32 per cent drop in Victoria

Housing starts away down

Housing starts in Victoria declined in 1974 by 32 per cent, compared with a national decline of about 12 per cent.

Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson said Tuesday he didn't think Victoria is as badly off for housing as other parts of Canada and housing starts are down all over . . . "50 per cent in the U.S."

He said there are lots of houses for sale in Victoria but the problem is the lack of mortgage funds and high interest rates which make it impossible for some people to buy.

Central Mortgage and Housing figures show 2,630 housing units were started in Victoria in 1974, compared with 4,013 units started in 1973.

The sharp decline was caused primarily by a 49 per cent drop in apartment construction, with 1,347 apartment units started in 1974, compared with 2,425 units in 1973.

Partly as a result of the drop in starts, house prices are expected to resume their upward climb in March, according to a study by the Victoria Real Estate Board.

Prices will go up if mortgage funds become available and interest rates decline in March, the spokesman predicted.

Already signalling an increase, the average Multiple Listing Sale in December was $1,000 higher than the average November sale.

In B.C., housing starts declined in the first nine months of 1974 by 13.6 per cent from the same period in 1973. Vancouver housing starts declined 11.9 per cent in the same period.

Died in rescue bid, Victorian cited

A Victoria man who lost his life while attempting to rescue a fisherman adrift in Lake Superior will be posthumously awarded the Star of Courage, Canada's second highest decoration for bravery.

Kari Joronen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Antti Joronen, 740 Burdett, died May 29, 1973, at the age of 29. He is one of four Canadians who will be honored for acts of heroism at an investiture in Government House, Ottawa, this spring.

Joronen, a graduate of Victoria high school, was with helicopter pilot Victor Solomatenko of Toronto when the two tried to resuce Aime Breton.

The helicopter hovered over Breton and lowered a rope but the fisherman was too exhausted from exposure to grasp it.

Joronen climbed out of the helicopter cabin and stood outside while the pilot brought the machine closer to the water. The helicopter dropped into the lake and overturned.

Solomatenko managed to escape but Joronen and Breton were lost. Solomatenko will also be awarded the Star of Courage.

Joronen's father Tuesday night remembered his son as a young man who was "always active, always leading an outdoor life."

Born in Finland, he moved here with his family about 20 years ago.

He started flying with the Kinsmen Air Cadet corps and later took flying lessons in Sudbury, Ont., as well as in Victoria.

When he had earned his commercial licence, he worked in Florida. He was with White River Air Service in Wawa, Ont., at the time of his death.

He had worked as a diver and quartermaster on one trip of the icebreaker Camsell to the Arctic. Besides to being an accomplished skier and fisherman, he was an oil painter and portrait artist.

Tug's cook played hero's role

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

A great big oil stove, a great-hearted Geordie cook and mouth-watering, five-course meals at Christmas and New Year's played a major part in keeping the morale of Sudbury II afloat during her nine-day rescue ordeal.

With a minimum of fuss, the rugged tug slipped quietly into Victoria's Inner Harbor Tuesday after hauling the battered freighter Corinna through a thousand miles of angry Pacific waters.

Both her master, Capt. Frank Culbard of Vancouver, and her chief engineer, Victoria's Harry Sapro, singled out Sudbury II cook Terry Garraghan from the 16-man crew for special praise.

Sapro, a seaman since 1943, knows better than most that a grouchy cook makes for a miserable crew, while a proper, easy-going ship's cook like Garraghan, can make "all the difference in the world" in keeping morale high.

Of the Christmas and New Year's dinners, Sapro said: "You could go downtown and pay $40 a head and you couldn't get a meal like he cooked us."

The Christmas meal Garragham cooked in the storm consisted of: Hors d'oeuvres, giblet soup, filet of sole meuniere, shrimp vol-au-vents, roast turkey, dressing, chipolata, asparagus tips with cream sauce, carrots, buttered green peas, whipped potatoes, straw potatoes.

And he followed that with plum pudding, rum sauce, mince pies, assorted nuts and candies.

And Garraghan, of 1120 Loenholm, a 32-year veteran of the high seas, was pleased to return the compliment Tuesday.

He termed the crew "just fantastic" in the way they helped out and held on to their cool and their plates while 40-foot seas whipped by 100 mile an hour winds rocked the Sudbury II.

Geordie (a native of Newcastle), who came from England's soccer-conscious northeast to Victoria 12 years ago, Garraghan's average sea-shift is 12 hours daily.

On Christmas Day and at New Year's he worked a full 18 hours.

He would rather cook at sea than on land because on terra firma, "well, you don't know your guests."

"If you put your back into it, you can do it," Garraghan says about cooking with "fridge doors flying open and stuff falling out."

The chef's specialty is curried chicken, the recipe for which he refuses to divulge.

Sudbury II was in Port Alberni when she went to rescue the Corinna, Christmas Eve.

The Liberian freighter had been dead in the water since Dec. 18 in the stormy Gulf of Alaska.

Captain Jung-Wen, 36, of the Corinna, and his 40-men crew were stranded helplessly when the boilers in the 510-foot vessel quit about 1,200 miles northwest of Vancouver Island.

The Corinna was towed into Vancouver Monday night by Sudbury II where her cargo of 223 Datsun automobiles were found to be undamaged despite the 19-day ordeal in the Pacific.

The Sudbury, owned by Seaspan International Ltd. is one of the most powerful tugs in the world. Among the ships it has rescued are The Atlantic Sun, Elli, Olympic Palms, Tainan, Lefkipos and Van Lene.

Pregnant ewes, ram killed

Roaming dogs destroy small flock of sheep

The Alan Littlers in Happy Valley had their small flock of sheep wiped out last weekend by dogs.

"We were just trying to build our little flock up," Mrs. Littler said Tuesday night. "They killed three pregnant ewes and one registered ram and left us nothing."

Mrs. Littler said the animals were found in the creek bed Saturday morning.

Dale Carnegie, domestic animal protection officer for the district, told The Colonist the dogs came about 5 a.m. Saturday, "did their business and were gone."

"You can tell it was dogs by the way they operated," Carnegie said.

This is the first sheep-killing of the year by dogs, he added, and "unless people take responsibility for their dogs, the killing will increase."

He said the kills are most prevalent at lambing time and, "unless people realize that their dog, any dog, is looked after, it can become a killer, it will get worse."

Carnegie said the new Domestic Animal Protection Act "has a lot more teeth in it than previous laws."

Fines to be levied against owners of dogs which kill sheep range from $15 an $500 and fines for non-purchase of licences run from $50 to $500.

"We're doing everything we can to prevent the kills," he went on. Mrs. Joan Yates and Carnegie are domestic animal protection officers for the area from View Royal to Sooke.

"We're patrolling as much and as widely as we can," he said, "but we can't be everywhere. We're picking up as many dogs as we can and of course that brings a $5 fine."

Sheep rancher Geoff Mitchell of Metchosin said he conducted a survey six years ago of sheep killed by dogs and found that there was a 12-per-cent loss of flock each year.

He sets dog traps on his property. The dogs go for meat bait and then find themselves enclosed in a cage. Mitchell then takes the dogs to the pound. They are not harmed and, in this way, he has protected his herd for the past three years.

Spring came early

Spring comes early to Geoff Mitchell's Sea Bluff Farm in Metchosin. Baby lambs started arriving Christmas Eve and, by Tuesday, numbered about 40. Mitchell, who has been raising sheep ever since he moved to Vancouver Island 25 years ago, expects total of 80 lambs by mid-January. He started with three sheep, ran herd up to 100, but says it's tapering off now. Present herd consists of about 60 ewes and one ram. Owing to high cost of grain he fed ewes on hay before lambing and finds sheep and offspring healthier than usual. Admiring new lambs are neighbors Renge Black, 5, left, and brother Sailen, 7.

B.C. Tel told to give back security funds

By STEPHEN BREWER
Colonist Reporter

The B.C. Supreme Court has been asked to order B.C. Tel to refund about $140,000 worth of security deposits the company has collected from its customers, the Colonist learned Tuesday.

A motion was filed in Vancouver in mid-November, a staff lawyer for the Vancouver Community Legal Assistance Society said in a telephone interview.

David Massop said the motion had been filed by Allan MacLean, also a VCLAS staff lawyer, on behalf of UBC law student Ross Green.

MacLean said Green was acting on his own behalf and on behalf of all other residential telephone users in the province.

The motion was sparked, at least in part, by complaints from B.C. Tel subscribers in the Courtenay-Campbell River area, the lawyer added.

The action Green is seeking would require B.C. Tel to not only refund the security deposits, which MacLean said totalled roughly $140,000, but also to pay interest to those subscribers who had posted them.

The company has until Jan. 15 to file a defence brief, MacLean said, after which a hearing date will be set.

No company spokesmen in Vancouver could be reached for comment, and a Victoria B.C. Tel spokesman said he was not aware the motion had been filed.

VCLAS won a similar action in December, 1972, against B.C. Hydro.

In that earlier decision, Mr. Justice W. R. McIntyre of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that security deposits collected by B.C. Hydro from its residential customers were illegal.

The ruling held that public utilities are required to treat all their customers alike and cannot command security deposits from some customers and not from others.

The VCLAS brought the case against Hydro on behalf of Philip Rankin, Alistair Waddell and Karen Chastin, who contended the security deposit was illegal because it was discriminatory.

Vehicles off streets?

The city of Victoria is considering the feasibility of a program to reduce vehicle traffic on residential streets.

The idea is to divert traffic from secondary residential streets to major traffic arteries by installing curbs and planters at specific intersections.

The result would be beautification of residential streets and more safety for pedestrians, especially children.

City council's traffic committee instructed the traffic engineer Tuesday to prepare a study on the cost of treating intersections in the necessary manner.

Council's interest in the matter was sparked by residents of Pembroke who presented a petition to council following a traffic accident last November in which a five-year-old girl was hit by a car and suffered a fractured skull in the 1300-block Pembroke.

The residents asked council to order the installation of speed bumps, but aldermen said that proposal wasn't feasible.

If city council adopts the proposal to use the traffic diversion scheme, Pembroke will probably be the site for a pilot project.

In that case, Pembroke would be closed between Stanley and Oregon. That short block might be converted to a small playground "where kids can shoot a hockey puck," or simply be landscaped.

Traffic normally using Pembroke would be diverted either to Bay or Begbie. Traffic now using Oregon and Stanley would be routed to either Fernwood or Bay.

Traffic department officials told the committee that a similar scheme has been tried successfully in San Francisco.

Phase 3 begins at old building

The provincial government has moved into phase three in its renovation of the old Victoria Press Building at 2631 Douglas. Public Works Minister William Hartley has announced that a contract for $196,913 has been awarded to Dalziel Construction, a Victoria-based firm, for the project.

Donors help blood crisis

About 1,200 blood donors in Nanaimo and Vancouver have helped ease critical provincial blood shortage that had reduced Royal Jubilee Hospital's operating schedule to emergencies only.

Joan Waton, Red Cross public relations director in Vancouver, said Tuesday the 1,200 pints donated Monday represent a two-day stock for the blook bank, which supplies all provincial hospitals and which was down to about a half-day's supply Monday. The three-day Nanaimo clinic, which started Monday, is the only clinic now operating on Vancouver Island.

Ms. Watson said that to build up a normal supply, about 800 people a day will have to give blood for the rest of this week.

Dr. Ray Le Huque, medical director at Royal Jubilee, said Tuesday the hospital placed a large order for blood Tuesday morning. If it is filled, he said, the hospital will be able to re-schedule surgery cases cancelled Monday when blood at Jubilee dipped to about one day's supply.

He said the hospital should know today if the order has been filled by the blood bank. Hanging in the balance are two open-heart surgery cases scheduled for Friday which can only be performed if the blood arrives. Two open-heart operations which had been planned for Monday have been postponed.

At Victoria General Hospital, which had normal blood supplies Monday, a spokesman said there was no "appreciable change" Tuesday. Surgery at Victoria General wasn't affected by the shortage.

Ms. Watson said the Red Cross requires, and gets about 2,200 donors a week to keep provincial hospitals supplied, "but we always run out just after Christmas and New Year's."

Main reason for the shortage is that clinics aren't held on holidays. This year, "we lost about a whole week of clinics," she said.

Only about 4 per cent of the population donates blood, she added.

Victoria's sights set on $200 hawker's fee

Victoria city aldermen have gone full circle in determining a suitable fee for street hawkers in the proposed Trades Licence Bylaw.

In a caucus meeting Tuesday, council agreed to set the fee at $200 and limit street hawkers to Centennial Square.

Essentially this is the same proposal that was placed before council-in-caucus late last November by Ald. William Tindall.

But, following that meeting, council-in-caucus decided to raise the fee to $700 and restrict the hawkers to one per side of a city block.

At that time, Tindall said the increased fee—highest fee for any type of retailer in the new bylaw — was designed to discourage street haekrs.

But by the time the bylaw reached the Dec. 12 council meeting for first reading, Mayor Peter Pollen said the fee would be lowered as it was not council's intention to discourage street hawkers.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers presented to council-in-caucus amendments that lowered the fee from $700 to $350 and froze the number of hawkers allowed in Centennial Square.

De Villiers said under these amendments, hawkers could either obtain six-month or yearly licences that could be paid for by the month.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson questioned whether hawkers wouldn't just pay for the months they operated and pack up after the tourists left.

Tindall
. . . made point

Caucus then agreed upon Tindall's original $200 fee with no monthly installments and to restrict later, if necessary, the number of licences granted.

Island stop for U.S. tug

The American deepsea tug Gemini, now in tow by the Vancouver tug Ocean Master, is due to stop over in Port Hardy tonight on its way to Seattle.

The Gemini received a cracked stern plate in a storm Thursday which caused her fuel supply to be contaminated by seawater. During the subsequent rescue operation, the weathership Quadra was called in from her post at Station Papa to stand by until Ocean Master arrived to take Gemini in tow.

Motorcyclist dies in creek

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Robert Angus Marander, 35, of Burnaby, was killed and two others injured when their motorcycles went out of control and plunged into a creek two miles south of here.

'Death Alley' on Cook

A section of Cook Street was labelled "Death Alley" Tuesday night by coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre at an inquest into Greater Victoria's first traffic fatality of 1975.

Dorothy Crighton, 76, of 805 Cook, died late Sunday afternoon after being struck by an automobile while crossing Cook at Burdett.

St. Jorre told the jury that Cook between Dallas and Fort was the worst street in his coroner's district for people getting killed.

Pathologist Dr. Bruce Hay told the inquest that Miss Crighton, a retired provincial government librarian and former Colonist music critic, died from massive bleeding in the chest cavity.

The inquest was adjourned until Jan. 13.

Earlier Tuesday, St. Jorre adjourned until March 6, an inquest in the November death of Mrs. Kathleen Arden, 78, of Colwood, to allow RCMP to continue their investigation.

Complaints rise to medical body

Patient complaints about their doctors are increasing, the registrar of the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons said Tuesday.

The number of written complaints that the college receives is increasing, Dr. W. G. McClure said, but most usually involve "a breakdown in communication."

"My impression is that the public is more ready to complain," he said, but he added that B.C. residents don't seem "litigation-minded and that's fortunate. It's not comfortable practising medicine with one eye over your shoulder," which is the situation in some parts of the United States where malpractice suits have become commonplace.

The complaints received by the college—the licensing body for all B.C. doctors—usually concern an alleged failure to provide some service, such as an x-ray.

"It's usually a judgmental decision and the complaint committee tries to explain to the complainant why what happened happened," McClure said. The complaint committee includes a lay member appointed by the provincial government.

McClure said the college receives about 5 or 6 written complaints a month.

The number of charges heard by the college against B.C. physicians has increased, he said, but not out of proportion to the increase in the number of doctors practising here. Last year, about 20 charges were heard by the college—about four of which dealt with unprofessional conduct.

McClure said most Canadian doctors are insured against malpractice suits by the Canadian Medical Protective Association, which is affiliated with the Canadian Medical Association.

It has recently raised its insurance premiums to $100 a year from $50 a year which is still far less than the average $3,000-a-year premiums that some Los Angeles doctors must pay, said McClure.

Tower possible for park

There's a good chance the Esso station tower at Victoria's Inner Harbor will become the centrepiece of a small park.

Initial opposition to Ald. Sam Bawlf, who would like to see the tower preserved as a historic landmark, is dwindling.

City council's central area development committee, instructed the city engineer Tuesday to prepare a report on the feasibility of retaining the tower and beautifying the space now occupied by the service station.

The station was bought by the city last year for $225,000 as part of Victoria's program to rehabilitate the Inner Harbor.

The site will be vacated by the end of this month after which the station is to be demolished.

In a brief report to the committee, city planning director Geoffrey Greenhalgh said the "vertical element of the tower and the single horizontal building were integrated into an unusually sophisticated design" at the time of construction in 1930.

Greenhalgh added that the tower could be retained without the service station, although "it loses much of its aesthetic appeal without its original base."

Local MPs to speak on pay raises

Victoria Conservative MP Allan McKinnon and a spokesman for Saanich Conservative MP Donald Munro will speak at a public debate on Prime Minister Trudeau's recent attempt to increase the salaries of MPs.

The meeting is in response to Trudeau's suggestion that MPs justify to their constituents the government's attempts to get them more money.

It will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at Oak Bay junior high school, 2101 Cadboro Bay Road.

PROVINCIAL COURT

The cost will be $1,586 for a Victoria man who made nine false statements between Jan. 25 and May 3 of last year in claiming unemployment insurance benefits in Victoria.

William Lowe, 26, of 1254 Johnson, pleaded guilty Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court before Judge William Ostler to a nine-count charge laid under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

An official of the Unemployment Insurance Commission said Lowe submitted nine claim cards saying he was not working when he actually was, and thereby was overpaid in benefits by $1,046.

Ostler fined Lowe $60 on each count, a total of $540, ordering repayment at a rate of $50 a month starting Feb. 1. The judge also was assured by the commission official that Lowe had been asked to repay the $1,046 and steps to regain the money can be taken if he does not pay voluntarily.

James David Bahr, 22, a recent arrival from La Ronge, Sask., pleaded not guilty to a Victoria charge of possession Tuesday of six counterfeit $50 bills and of uttering two of the bills at stores.

He was remanded to today by Ostler for discussion of bail and setting of a trial date. Bahr then pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana when police arrested him in a youth hostel at 1900 Fernwood.

He was sentenced to a $75 fine or 14 days in jail and asked for time to pay. Bahr said he didn't have enough money now but had recently received a welfare cheque. Ostler noted the welfare money had apparently paid for the marijuana and made the fine payable forthwith.

Bahr thus must serve 14 days unless he gets enough money in the meantime.

Ostler imposed a total jail term of 40 days and a one-year driving ban against Gene Kenneth Smith, 29, of Brentwood Bay, who pleaded guilty to a Central Saanich charge of impaired driving and driving while under a licence suspension Monday evening.

Prosecutor C. W. Vause said Smith's car went into a skid on Stelly's Cross Road, crashed through a fence and knocked over two small trees before stopping three feet from a home. He said Smith tried to run but was held by two citizens and an off-duty policeman.

Smith was convicted in Sidney only last month of impaired driving.

□

Victoria area resident Stephen Lawrence Knight, 18, address not known, was fined $150 by Ostler following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of possession of LSD. Prosecutor James McLellan said Knight had three "hits" — street-sale units — of the drug when police checked him Dec. 14 on Yates between Douglas and Broad.

□

Feb. 13 was set by Ostler as the date for preliminary hearing of a Victoria charge of break-in and theft against Edward King Krobel, 30, address not known. Krobel elected trial by county court judge on the charge, laid after an estimated $998 worth of clothing was taken Thursday from Dorman's store, 1328 Douglas.

□

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a plea of guilty brought Rodney Walter Stanley Wells, 43, of 1450 Douglas, a one-day jail sentence and a three-year term of probation. Wells admitted obtaining money by false pretences when he cashed a $540 cheque July 19 at a Victoria hotel.

Ex-Victorian to appeal ruling against sex shop

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Joe Payne, 23, a former Victoria resident who wants to open an adult sex shop in Prince George, said Tuesday he will appeal a decision announced Monday in the B.C. Supreme Court that upheld city council's decision to refuse him a business licence.

Mr. Justice E. D. Fulton ruled that city council had the right under provincial law to exercise discretion on whether such a licence should be granted and did so reasonably and with the public interest in mind.

The company which wants to open the Garden of Eden, would sell lingerie, bed sheets, printed matter and "adult" items and would allow only adults on the premises. Payne would be manager.

Kelly Covin of Victoria, owner of the Garden of Eden, said he hopes the case will go to the B.C. Court of Appeal as soon as possible.

Bennett's secretary quits public service

Kay Mylrea, in public service since 1933, has stepped down as private secretary to Opposition leader William Bennett.

Mrs. Mylrea was private secretary to former premier W. A. C. Bennett until the defeat of the Social Credit government in August 1972.

She will be replaced in the Social Credit leader's office by Miss Nonie Challen.

Firm given permission to put up barbed wire

Victoria Ald. Michael Young warned his colleagues Tuesday that he would apply to city council for permission to string a barbed wire fence around his house.

Young's remarks came after council's public works committee decided to grant a Victoria firm permission to use three strands of barbed wire on top of a fence surrounding its premises.

The use of barbed wire is prohibited by bylaw in the city of Victoria.

The request to use barbed wire came from Northwest Propane Ltd. The company said in a letter to city council it wants to install the wire to keep thieves from stealing valuable equipment.

Ald. Murray Glazier pointed out that the barbed wire would also be a safety factor, but Young replied that only empty bottles would be stored on the site at Bay and Tyee.

Amsterdam's Dam Square . . . a living reminder of the past

Amsterdam's 700th anniversary

History rich, even unique

By PETER TONGE
Colonist - Monitor News Service

AMSTERDAM, Holland — I was looking for a good Dutch cheese to take home to my family and found what I wanted in one of those intimate little specialty shops that help make this city so fascinating.

It was a large round sweet milk variety, "typically Dutch" the girl behind the counter assured me. Then as I turned to go she added: "You will bring next year all your family to Amsterdam's big birthday party. Yes?"

That big birthday party is the year-long festivities planned to celebrate Amsterdam's 700th anniversary in 1975.

As the burgemeester (Mayor), Dr. I. M. Samkalden, is quick to acknowledge, Amsterdam is still a relatively young city, compared with say Rome. But its "short" history has been a rich, even unique one in many respects.

It was once the wealthiest city in Europe, the trading capital of the world, the place where the stock exchange and other present-day banking and investment principles were developed. It allowed freedom of thought and expression when supression was the general rule elsewhere. Arts and crafts flourished here as nowhere else in the 16th and 17th centuries.

The oppressed from other countries came to Amsterdam: Portuguese Jews, English dissenters, French Huguenots. They came from all over Europe bringing their knowledge and skills as merchants, craftsmen, and scientists.

In so many respects, then, Amsterdam was a unique city. It still is today. How many other cities can boast of so much 17th-century and earlier architecture that remains intact today? Of a city centre that is, in effect, a living reminder of the past?

"Welcome to our museum," says a tour guide, only half in jest as she waves her arm to take in all the area surrounding "the Dam."

Other cities have canals but none, not even Venice, is laced with quite so many as Amsterdam.

Then there is the Amsterdammer himself. For the most part he is a friendly, likable person, ready to help the tourist, and, that's right, speak to him in his, the tourist's, own language.

This last statement exaggerates the situation, of course. Not every Amsterdammer speaks Russian or even Spanish. But you will search for days for one who doesn't speak English and almost as long for one who knows no French. German, too, is freely spoken.

It is not certain how Amsterdam began. Legend has it that after a storm three fishermen and a dog found themselves washed up in a shallow, reed-filled bay of the Zuider Zee at the mouth of the Amstel River.

A small fishing village arose there which subsequently surpassed all of its neighbors because the enterprising inhabitants erected a dam wall across the Amstel. Ostensibly this was to keep the Zuider Zee from the river, but many believe that right from the start the villagers intended to exact a toll on all goods hauled over the dam for shipment inland up the Amstel. The dam and the Amstel gave rise to the name Amsterdam.

Trade flourished and by 1275 Count Floris V granted exemption from toll throughout his country to all Amsterdam merchants.

This proclamation, dated Oct. 27, 1275, is the oldest written reference to Amsterdam and is thus considered the official birthdate of the city.

The program is nowhere near completion yet, but many special festivities are planned for the coming 12 months. The prerequisites for all events, too, are that they provide benefits to the Community over and above the merely festive and that they include all segments of Amsterdam.

Basically the events are being divided into indoor activities, scheduled for the first and last quarters of the year, and outdoor activities which will largely take place between April and September.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell "Very Anonymous" that she is "Very Mistaken," along with other Catholics who believe it is a sin to use contraceptives.

I am a Catholic and several years ago, after having five children, my husband and I visited a cousin who had just gotten his master's degree from Boston College. He told us that using artificial birth control was not considered a sin—that non-use was a "suggestion," and not given by the Pope from the seat of infallibility. I was shocked to hear this and was sure he was wrong.

I then wrote to a priest who answered questions in a Catholic magazine. His reply came (along with a letter) saying "it is NOT a sin." He said the Church preferred that Catholics not interfere with birth, but that it was "a personal decision."

I've had doctors tell me that the rhythm system fails about 15 per cent of the time. For couples who feel their families are large enough, this system is not very safe. The woman has no peace of mind from one month to the next. It's a nerve-wracking way to live.

So please, Ann, print this letter and liberate a large number of women who don't know the facts. It could be a great service.—From Massachusetts

Dear Mass.: I consulted one of the most knowledgeable Jesuits in the country to get my answer. Rev. Richard McCormick, professor at the Kennedy Institute of Georgetown University in Washington, D.C, and former president of the Catholic Theological Society of America said: "Your Boston cousin's statement is incorrect. Pope Paul's Encyclical on Humane Vitae, issued on July 29, 1968, authoritatively reasserted the traditional Catholic position on birth control, the basic concept being that the use of contraceptives is inherently evil and should be shunned.

"The reaction to the Encyclical among Catholic theologians created a great deal of dissension. Many theologians and some bishops felt that Pope Paul had not faced up to the conflictive character of the values of married life, and that birth control techniques should be left to the individual couples."

Father McCormick made it clear that abortions are not included among the "techniques."

In answer to your question, "Is it a sin?"—some priests and even some bishops who did not agree with Pope Paul's Encyclical have given the green light to Catholic couples who ask that question. Many others take the traditional view. According to two recent studies, almost as many Catholics use contraceptives as those of other faiths.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 30 and was petitioned by my wife as a permanent resident of this country. We are now separated. I love it here and I want to stay.

The problem: My wife opened some charge accounts without my knowledge. The creditors are hounding me. I work in a large office for a modest salary and I don't know what to do.

I'm afraid these people who want their money will ruin my reputation with the Immigration Service. They can also hurt me at my place of employment. Please advise. —Gray Hairs

Dear G.H.: Tell your boss of your problem at once. If there is an attorney in your office he will be able to counsel you.

GENEVA (UPI) — Men should help out more in the home to share the burden of women who hold outside jobs, according to the International Labor Organization.

"A more equal and equitable sharing of the burden of housework and the care of children between men and women is one of the prerequisites of sexual equality," a recent ILO report said.

The report, Equality of Opportunity and Treatment for Women Workers, said one in three of the world's 1.6 billion workers is a woman.

Equality between male and female workers is a major target of the ILO, a specialized agency of the United Nations, and the issue will be debated at the organization's annual conference in June.

Alleged biography 'bunk', says Cagney

NEW YORK (UPI) — Retired movie great James Cagney has obtained a temporary restraining order barring the imminent publication of an allegedly unauthorized biography, which he characterized as "bunk."

The restraining order was granted by Manhattan Supreme Court Justice Thomas Chimera, barring Stein and Day Publishers, Inc., of Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., W. H. Allen and Co. Ltd., of London, and author Michael Friedland, a BBC journalist, from further preparation of the book, Cagney: A Biography, for publication.

The order also directed the defendants to appear in court Friday to show why an injunction barring publication should not be issued.

In a supporting affidavit, the 70-year-old Cagney charged that the Friedland book, first published in London on Dec. 2, is "full of inaccuracies, falsities and invented dialogue.

"I was very upset with the prospect of the bunk in Friedland's book moving toward publication as a purported factual review of my life," the 70-year-old retired actor said in the affidavit.

Cagney claimed that Friedland used material from a one-hour interview granted him last March 13 before Cagney was given the life achievement award by the American Film Institute.

In the affidavit, Cagney said that he told Friedland before the interview, "I want to get this straight — this interview is going to be used only by BBC radio." Friedland allegedly replied, "definitely," the affidavit said.

Cagney, who brought suit with Doubleday and Co., Inc., of New York, planning a release later this year of Cagney's autobiography, said that the "most significant inaccuracies regard my parents, my early life, my show business career and miscellaneous matter."

He said the first crop processed would be potatoes.

Watergate coverup

Trial recreated

BOSTON (AP) — A televised "drama for public education," recreating the recently completed Watergate coverup trial, is planned by a co-producer of the TV special The White House Transcripts.

Thomas McCann, head of the public relations and documentary film company in Boston, said the two-hour show will be entitled The Watergate Cover-Up Trial. It will use actors and official court stenographers' transcripts and McCann hopes to have it ready soon after the court release tape recordings made by former President Richard Nixon.

The White House Transcripts, a 90-minute show which was sold to the CBC, has been shown in Canada, Boston, New York and Denver.

Fewer Soviets move to Israel

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Soviet immigration to Israel dropped in 1974 to half the number of arrivals in 1973, according to year-end figures released by the Jewish Agency. Some 17,000 Soviets reached Israel during 1974, as compared with more than 33,000 the previous year.

CHANNEL ONE: You may recall a recent spate of stories claiming the NBC series Police Story was responsible for a series of derelict murders that seemed to be patterned on a recent episode of the show. Now, the Los Angeles police department says it wasn't so — but that story didn't make the wire services and I wonder why not.

Police Story was the first series to win official renewal for next season and ABC's Streets of San Francisco has become the second, despite weakening ratings . . . actor Paul Richards, best known as the star of the psychiatrist series Breaking Point, has died in Los Angeles of cancer. A longtime movie heavy, Richards was only 50.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Tuesday's answer — "A million baby kisses I'll deliver if you will only sing that Swanee River" is the complete song section we were seeking, tune detectives. It all comes from Rockabye Your Baby to a Dixie Melody, commonly known as Rockabye Your Baby or One More Time.

Today's question — The same song suggests a cradle be placed on the Mason-Dixon line and swung from one state to another "with all the love that's in ya." All you have to do is name the two states; answers Thursday.

"Testing . . . we have temporarily lost the audio portion of our program . . . testing . . ."

Brezhnev to be host

LONDON — Despite reports that Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev is ill, diplomatic sources disclosed Tuesday he plans to host a state visit to Russia by Prime Minister Harold Wilson beginning Feb. 11. Wilson's office refused comment. The sources said the visit indicates the Soviet secretary neither is seriously ill nor, as some reports suggest, about to be replaced. They said Brezhnev has been sick, but not sick enough to keep him from his leadership duties.

Seek work in Canada crew told

LE HAVRE (CP) — The catering and hotel crew aboard the French liner France, which has been taken out of service, have been told to seek work in Canada.

The France's owners, the French Line, said Tuesday there is a shortage of qualified French-speaking hotel staff in Quebec, and the number of hotel jobs is also likely to increase between now and 1976, when the Olympic Games will be held in Montreal. Seventeen new large, luxury hotels are to open in Quebec City and Montreal, providing 6,000 jobs.

Researchers baffled on marijuana issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of research scientists have conceded they are just as confused about the effects of marijuana as the smokers and lawmakers who come to them for advice.

"We don't have reliable data to reliably guide people as to how they should behave," said Dr. Daniel Freedman of the University of Chicago, summarizing a day-long scientific meeting on marijuana research.

After the closed conference Monday, four spokesmen said scientists do not agree on how to answer those people who turn to them for advice about whether the drug will harm their health or whether criminal penalties should be reduced.

Good answers about marijuana's effects on human health and behavior are four to five years away, the scientists said.

"If marijuana were a drug about to be introduced to the market and one listened to evidence in the five fields that were reviewed . . . I think experts would first react with some confusion and shock," Freedman said.

"If you are a consumer who wants to understand what the drug might do to him, I think you would find the conference most confusing."

The conference of drug researchers and specialists in genetics immunology, hormones, central nervous systems and psychiatric disturbances was convened by the non-government drug abuse council.

Dr. Thomas Bryant, president of the foundation-financed council, said the intent was "to set the record straight" on recently publicized findings about potential hazards of smoking marijuana.

Instead, he said, it was frustrating because the 19 participants were unable to come up with any "clear cut, black or white answers" about these reported findings.

Freedman said the public should stop turning to the so-called experts for answers and make its own decisions on health hazards and legal penalties.

"The question the public is going to have to decide is whether or not they want to spend the money they spend on criminalizing marijuana, and whether or not they want to regulate access to its use."

Two alive, 3 dead in plane

SEATTLE (AP) — Search crews found two persons alive Tuesday at the wreckage of a light plane in snow-covered mountainous terrain of southeast King county.

King county police said three of the five persons aboard were dead. The plane had been missing since Sunday when it went down in a snowstorm after encountering icy conditions.

The survivors were identified as Mrs. Marilyn Foos, 49, and one of the two pilots, Gregory Bennett.

The victims were identified by King county officials as Mrs. Foos' husband, Paul Foos, 50, who was being brought to Seattle for medical treatment in the ambulance flight; Lenore Crowley, a registered nurse; and the other pilot, Michael Bass.

County police said two rescue workers were injured bringing the survivors out.

U.S. revives check on DES in cattle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. agriculture department officials soon will revive a cattle "certification" program designed to keep tiny but illegal residues of a cancer-causing hormone out of beef livers, it was learned Tuesday.

The decision came to light following the department's report in late December that residues of the hormone, DES, were found in livers of seven out of 2,853 steers and heifers tested in a sampling program during 1974 — a violation rate of one-quarter of one per cent.

Independent calculations based on the government data showed the violation rate raises the possibility that nearly 71,000 cattle may have gone to market carrying illegal traces of DES in liver last year.

Under the certification system, farmers shipping beef cattle to slaughter would file documents stating the animals had not been given rations including the growth-promoting hormone, or that they had been placed on DES-free feed for seven days before delivery. The seven-day period is believed long enough to allow natural elimination of the hormone.

If cattle arrived at a packing plant without certificates, they would have to be held on DTS-free feed for seven days before they could legally be slaughtered, an official said.

Prisoners to make $2.20 wage

OTTAWA (CP) — Beginning with 80 medium-security prisoners at Joyceville prison near Kingston, Ont., the Canadian penitentiary service will gradually put federal convicts to work at as much as $2.20 an hour, a penitentiary service official said Tuesday.

But it will be at least a year before the Joyceville pilot project for prisoner employment is under way and even longer before paid work is available to most of the more than 9,000 convicts in federal institutions, the official said.

He said penitentiary authorities are going ahead with a cabinet-approved plan, announced last May by Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, to put convicts into everyday working situations and pay them the going federal minimum wage which now is $2.20 an hour.

The Joyceville prisoners would construct metal office furniture to be sold to the government.

CIA probe to start next week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller announced Tuesday his special commission to investigate alleged domestic spying by the CIA will hold its first meeting next week with agency director William Colby and others.

The others were not named, but are expected to include ambassador to Iran Richard Helms, who headed the CIA during the time of the alleged surveillance of American war protestors and other dissidents.

State Secretary Kissinger also is expected to attend the initial session.

Rockefeller's quick move to get the investigation going apparently reflected the concern of top government officials that the agency's intelligence-gathering abroad might be hampered unless questions about its activities are cleared up quickly.

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

As usual, I have been inundated this past few weeks with letters from readers asking how to take care of various potted plants received as Christmas gifts. This year, I would say the majority of these letters are concerned with the houseplant chrysanthemum.

At one time, potted chrysanthemums were almost never found within the home.

For one thing, the plants grew much too tall for houseplant use, although ideal for greenhouse decoration.

For another, they were in bloom ONLY during the fall of the year.

★ ★ ★

Nowadays, hormone chemicals are used, together with other techniques, to produce short, compact plants, and by manipulating artificial light and shading with black cloths, growers can create an artificial autumn in the greenhouse, thereby bring the plants into bloom in time for Christmas, Easter, Mother's Day or any desired target date.

These gift plants prefer a sunny window in a decidedly cool room, well removed from steam radiators or hot air registers, ideally around 60 degrees.

Water when the soil surface feels dry to the touch, giving only enough to moisten the soil throughout but without sogginess. Any water draining into the saucer under the plant should be emptied before it can be reabsorbed.

The question most commonly asked about the potted chrysanthemum is whether it can be held over to bloom another year; it can, but not without a period of outdoor growth, which rules out apartment dwellers.

When the plant finishes blooming and no more buds are produced, cut it back to three-inch stubs and discard the topgrowth.

Store the plant in a cold but frost-free place, maintaining the soil almost but not quite bone dry. The idea here is to maintain life in the roots but without encouraging any new topgrowth.

As a rough guide, I would say half a cup of water once a MONTH would bt about right during its dormant period.

★ ★ ★

In the spring, after all the danger of frost has passed, shake the plant out of its pot and break up the mass of roots into single-stemmed pieces.

Plant these out individually —each one will make a new plant—selecting a sunny site with well-drained, sandy loam soil.

Keep well watered through the summer, with an occasional treat of soluble houseplant fertilizer in its water —say, about every second week.

Keep a close watch for aphids, examining the backs of the leaves and the growing tips frequently through the summer, as these plant lice seem to have a special fondness for chrysanthemums. Mildew is a fairly common problem too, but is easily controlled with Benomyl or Karathane.

In the fall, before the first frost threatens, these plants are potted up and brought indoors to a sunny but very cool window. The plants will be much taller than before, and will probably require staking.

★ ★ ★

By far the most important factor in bringing these plants into bloom again is to make sure they are never exposed to artificial light during the evening hours.

They need ample sunshine by day, but must have total and uninterrupted darkness from sunset until dawn. Any increase in day-length through artificial lighting will delay or prevent the formation of flower buds.

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Even in its final gasp, Watergate had a touch of irony. The jury's decision was announced just as 60 million people were sitting down to watch a football game which, as everyone knows, was former President Nixon's favorite spectator sport.

I was in my living room with my Uncle Ben when NBC broke into the Rose Bowl festivities with its bulletin.

Uncle Ben turned to me, "What the hell's going on?"

"The jury has arrived at a verdict in the Watergate conspiracy trial."

"During the Rose Bowl?"

"They didn't plan to arrive at a verdict during the Rose Bowl, Uncle Ben. It just turned out that way."

"We've waited two and a half years for something to happen," Uncle Ben pouted. "They could have waited another two hours until the game was over."

★ ★ ★

"It will only take a few minutes. Listen, Carl Stern is reading the verdicts."

Stern reported that four out of the five defendants were found guilty.

"What happened to the Big Enchilada?" Uncle Ben wanted to know.

"That's Mitchell. He's been found guilty."

"I don't mean him. I mean the REAL Big Enchilada, numero uno — the commander-in-chief, the former president of all the people."

"I guess he's at home watching the Rose Bowl like everybody else."

"What do you think the defendants could get?"

"One to 25 depending on their probation reports."

"What could Nixon get?"

"A $60,000-a-year pension plus $200,000 for office expenses."

"How come everyone has to do time except the guy who started the whole thing?"

"Because Gerry Ford pardoned him. No matter what crimes Nixon committed, they can't lay a glove on him. Surely you wouldn't want a former president of the United States tried for conspiracy and obstruction of justice?"

"Not if the jury brought in its verdict during the Rose Bowl game," Uncle Ben said.

★ ★ ★

"Uncle Ben, this is the last football game they'll ever interrupt to bring us a bulletin about Watergate. It's over and done with. It's behind us — just like Nixon wanted it to be two years ago. From now on it's going to be nothing but roses for anyone watching the Rose Bowl."

"I hope you're right," Uncle Ben said. "It isn't fair for USC and Ohio State to be mixed up with Watergate."

"I'm certain no one watching will tie in USC and Ohio State with Watergate. After all, the crimes were committed in Washington, and the teams are playing in Pasadena."

"What do you think they'll give us for a half-time show?"

"I think they'll go back to Carl Stern in front of the federal courthouse for further developments."

"Why doesn't the USC band just spell out the verdicts on the football field?"

"They can't. It would spoil Nixon's New Year."

Sydney Harris

As my regular readers know, I never name-drop in this column, because I think it's a dumb and deplorable habit — which also happens to diminish the dropper rather than enhance him.

But occasionally it's impossible to avoid — particularly when it's the whole point of the story. Like the letter I received today, from a man in Philadelphia, apropos a recent piece of mine about art patrons.

He recounted the anecdote I had heard many times before, about Fritz Kreisler, the famed violinist, being hired to play at a private reception. In his version, it was Lady Astor who hired him for the agreed price of $5,000.

★ ★ ★

Then Lady Astor is supposed to have said, "Of course, I do not expect you to mingle with the guests." To which, Kreisler, bowing smoothly, retorted, "In that case, madam, the price will be only $2,500."

Now the only thing wrong with this story is that it libels the character and personality of the late Nancy Astor, whom I happened to know. She was no more capable of making that snide remark to a distinguished performer than of streaking at a coronation.

She and her husband, Waldorf, and I traipsed down to Tucson one winter, many years ago — she because Waldorf was an asthmatic, and I because my small daughter suffered from the same ailment. We occupied nearby houses for the season, and occasionally dined out together.

One night, after dinner, at a little night club on the outskirts of town, I asked her to dance. She agreed with alacrity and we glided out on the floor.

In a few moments, I noticed that people at the table, and other dancers, were staring at us and laughing. I immediately looked down at my zipper, which is a man's first instinctive reaction, but all was securely fastened.

It was not until we sat down that I saw what had happened. Nancy had slipped a pair of those enormous false rubber teeth from her purse and put them on as we began dancing. And all during the number she was mugging outrageously, winking and grinning diabolically at the whole room.

Nobody I ever met was less stuffy or socially conscious than Nancy Astor — or, charmingly nuttier, in some respects. She might have confided to Kreisler that he'd be bored to bears by the guests she was forced to entertain, but never would have forbidden him from "mingling."

The moral of the story is: please don't attribute to some famous name a behavior or comment that belongs to some other, just because it seems to fit. No real lady, or Lady, would treat the help so contemptuously.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — If you want medical miracles performed, call Frank Sinatra. Over the weekend, Sammy Davis had trouble with his eye and told the bosses at Caesars Palace he would have to go to Los Angeles for treatment.

Billy Weinberger, faced with a huge holiday crowd, had to get a major replacement quick so he called Frank at 1 a.m.

Frank said he would be happy to do it both for the hotel and for Sammy.

Next morning, Sammy heard that Frank was replacing him so he asked his doctor to fly up to Las Vegas and examine the infection in the eye.

Meanwhile, Sinatra had alerted Bill Miller, his conductor, to alert the Sinatra musicians for an afternoon rehearsal.

Turned out there was no rehearsal. Sammy's doctor told him the eye would not affect his performance so Sammy kept the date.

★ ★ ★

It's like the Joseph Schildkraut story. Years ago, Joe was rehearsing a New York play and couldn't remember his lines. As opening night approached, the producer became so worried that he summoned Peter Witt, Joe's agent.

Witt walked on stage and whispered in Joe's ear. Two hours later, Joe knew his lines and everybody else's.

The producer asked Witt what he had whispered to Joe.

"I told him, 'They're going to replace you with Luther Adler."

Failures teach lessons

Stuart Rosenberg

Most people have a hard time not to hate themselves because of their failure or mistakes.

The most difficult task we face is to sit ourselves down, and without self-negation and depreciation, to try to understand the causes and reasons for our failure.

And even more: to acquire the requisite inner strength to live peaceably with ourselves, even when our list of reasons point in the direction of our self-limitations.

A wise man wrote: "I wonder why people so much admire a man with the courage of his convictions, while they totally ignore a much higher and rarer kind of courage.

"What I am referring to is the courage to examine one's convictions, and to revise them in the light of such scrutiny. It takes a genuinely courageous person to change his convictions when they should be changed."

A major stumbling block in the face of self-correction is the fear we have of admitting our failure. Much of our human heartbreak is traceable to this fundamental human frailty: the inability to change our life style is the direct result of our unwillingness to admit our mistakes.

Throughout our early, formative years, those who love us — our family, friends and teachers — repeatedly wish us good luck crowned with unending successes.

We might, however, be doing our children a very good turn, if in addition to wishing them every success, we also took them aside, now and again, to talk about the inevitable problems of their failure.

Success and achievement, we ought to be telling them, present no problem. But be prepared to handle the times you will strike out, so that the next time your turn comes, you won't be haunted by the terrible feeling that you're a born loser.

Our children need to know that every man must sometimes fail. No attorney wins every case; no author writes well all the time; no doctor always diagnoses properly. Then why should our children grow up expecting to inherit what is never given to any other man?

Why should they not be trained early to learn to outlive their mistakes? Why shouldn't we give them the wisdom to live courageously with their inevitable failure?

Failure, frustration, error and mistakes — all of these must be assimilated, integrated, digested and not permitted to ulcerate in our spiritual digestive-tract. And once integrated, we must faithfully move on.

The greatest thing we can do for a fellow man is to offer him our forgiveness when he has erred.

The greatest offering we can ourselves receive is the gift of self-understanding and self-forgiveness — and a readiness to press forward.

Fishing in winter is catching on

One thing is becoming evident as a result of the current Colonist King Winterfish Contest — more and more anglers are taking to winter fishing.

In the 1972 Winterfish Contest entries were dominated by a few highliners.

This year the entries are well ahead of the 1972 entries and far more people are catching the fish in a variety of areas from Campbell River to Oak Bay

A few years ago, winter chinoook fishing was almost exclusively the domain of tip-of-the-Island anglers around Victoria. Now most of the sheltered waters on the Island are producing winter fish for sports anglers.

Fifteen years ago there was very little winter sports fishing for chinook even in the Victoria area.

The biggest factor contributing to the increased interest is probably the advent of bigger sports fishing boats with high-powered motors on easy-to-handle trailers.

Every year more and more anglers take to the 14 to 19-foot portable runabout cruisers with shelter cabins.

Hearing won't deal with alcoholic wing

A public hearing Jan. 20 on Oak Bay Manor services will deal with a proposal that the retired persons' home offer "personal care" to residents, and not with a proposal to use one wing for the treatment of alcoholics, as reported in Tuesday's Colonist.

The area proposed for personal care is one wing on two floors and is not to exceed a maximum of 89 beds. Present zoning allows Oak Bay Manor to operate as a retirement home for permanent residents.

A request from the manager, Ian Else, that one wing of 18 rooms be used for a re-orientation program for people from industry who have a drug or alcohol problem, was referred to committee A and will not be considered at the Jan. 20 hearing at 7:30 p.m. at the municipal hall.

Inn closure no ploy—owner

The owner of Victoria's Mediaeval Inn has angrily denied he closed down the restaurant Saturday to avoid living up to contract laws imposed on him by the B.C. Labor Relations Board late last year.

"The union can call the closure a ploy if they want," owner John Jones snapped in an interview from his Vancouver office late Tuesday.

"And the union can come around next week and help us move the furniture out if they want — we're deadly serious."

The downtown Victoria restaurant owner was reacting to charges earlier this week that the closure was an attempt to scare union members and frighten them into accepting a contract which would not give them benefits as attractive as those contained in the LRB-ordered contract.

Those charges were levelled by Erin Ralph, shop steward for Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union at the Inn, who told reporters Monday she considered the closure "definitely a tactic" designed by management to escape the imposed contract.

"We'll see how much of a ploy it is," Jones said Tuesday afternoon.

"Separation certificates for 20 of them will be in Victoria tomorrow (Wednesday), laying them all off."

Arrangements are being made to strip the restaurant of its furniture and kitchen equipment, he added, all of which will be shipped to Seattle, where Jones is planning to open another Mediaeval Inn.

Jones said meetings with the union Monday, to discuss the possibility of re-opening the restaurant, had failed miserably.

"Their attitude was 'the Labor Board giveth, only the Labor Board can taketh away'," Jones snapped.

"The place is going to stay closed, unless someone moves ... and it's not going to be us."

UIC raiding provincial treasury, civil servant charges

'Unemployed dumped on welfare'

By LORRAINE ATHERTON

A provincial civil servant has charged the Unemployment Insurance Commission with "robbing the provincial treasury" by arbitrarily withholding unemployment benefits and forcing the temporarily jobless onto welfare rolls.

Walter Muller, a job-finder for welfare recipients in Vancouver and a Social Credit candidate in the last federal election, estimated that about 20 per cent or $24 million of B.C.'s welfare payments went to people whose unemployment insurance benefits had been delayed or "callously" cut off.

That estimate was a conservative one, Muller said, because it was based on welfare statistics released in September. Since then, rising unemployment had escalated the problem and UIC appeared to be making it even tougher for people to collect benefits, he said.

In Victoria, Janette Shelton, vice-president of Community Action Group, agreed with Muller.

She guessed that the number of individuals who went to her group with unemployment insurance problems had increased by 10 per cent in the last three months. Although she handled mainly formal appeals to the UIC, she said, she knew of many people who had trouble simply finding out whether they qualify for benefits.

One woman had been waiting six months, she said.

People had always complained about UIC, and problems had increased with the recent jump in unemployment, Ms. Shelton noted.

The delays must certainly cost the human resources department, because "our usual course is to send these people to social assistance," she added.

Every available ship thrown at huge slick

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Singapore mobilized all available ships and men Tuesday night in a massive effort to contain and disperse a million-gallon oil slick already threatening the western part of the port, the world's fourth largest.

The 10-mile slick came from three ruptured tanks of the Japanese 237,698-ton supertanker Showa Maru, which ran onto rocks five miles southeast of Singapore at daybreak Monday.

Habitual crime will draw longer terms

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

Tougher terms of probation and longer jail sentences are in the offing for habitual criminals in B.C., according to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

Macdonald said Tuesday that he was "increasingly coming to the opinion that some people cannot be rehabilitated. All the noble experiments of the past 20 years simply do not work in the terms of prison rehabilitation of people."

On Jan. 23 the attorney-general will be meeting with federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and local municipalities on the Lower Mainland to discuss crime and policing problems.

"We shall try to present a case for better-trained police services and more extensive police services," Macdonald said. "And we shall continue to emphasize the need to prevent crime."

The attorney-general said the time had come when decisions must be made on "who is dangerous to society and therefore has to be confined, or under some form of probation that protects society."

Non-dangerous criminals will be treated differently, Macdonald said. "Where alternative forms of sentencing can be imposed without endangering society, that will be our aim. We shall be sure that these people are not damaged and made worse than they are at the present time in terms of anti-social behavior."

Macdonald said the matter of bail laws was also on the agenda for discussion.

Record wage accepted

Freights rolling on BCR tracks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first freight trains to move on British Columbia railway tracks since a strike by shopcraft workers began six weeks ago were in operation Tuesday.

Two northbound trains, one out of North Vancouver and one out of Prince George, started moving shortly after a new nine-month contract between shopcraft workers and the railway was gined.

A spokesman for the government-owned railway said it would take about seven days for operations to return to normal.

The 550 employees, members of five shopcraft unions, voted 242-to-106 in favor of a new nine-month agreement which Norm Farley, chief union negotiator, said would make the workers the highest-paid railway workers in North America.

The contract includes a wage increase of $1.29 an hour which raises the basic tradesman rate to $7.09 an hour from $5.80. It also provides for an inquiry into labor-management relations between the crown corporation and the unions.

Company and union representatives signed the new contract Tuesday.

When the shopcraft workers walked out Nov. 21, the company had offered an increase of 87 cents an hour, while the unions were seeking an immediate increase of $1.25 and another mid-contract increase of 20 cents an hour.

The new contract expires July 30.

The strike had resulted in layoffs of about 2,000 of the 3,200-member BCR work force.

The strike led to temporary food shortages in some areas dependent on the railway, which runs from North Vancouver to Fort St. John. The dispute also resulted in further cutbacks in an already depressed forest industry in the province's interior.

British hijacking

Fake gun, fake bomb —and fake airport

LONDON (UPI) — A man of Arab appearance seized a British jetliner in flight and extorted $235,000 in ransom Tuesday in a bluff with an imitation pistol and a dummy grenade. The hijacker was captured when the pilot flew him to an airfield near London instead of to France as the gunman demanded.

The hijacker, in his late 20s, was overpowered by a police doghandler as he ran from the plane after landing at Stansted airport, 34 miles northeast of London.

He left the ransom behind in the plane and was carrying what Scotland Yard deputy commissioner Wilfred Gibson said was a "replica pistol." As for the suspected grenade cannister carried on the plane by the hijacker, Gibson said, "No explosives have been found."

The only casualty in the capture was British Airways steward Alan Bond, 35, one of five hostages the hijacker took. He was nipped by a police dog in the scuffle on the darkened airfield.

Gibson said the hijacker refused to answer police questions and he could not immediately identify him or his motives. He described him as of "Arab appearance with very long hair and a mustache. He spoke good English to the pilot but he is almost certainly not British."

The hijacker seized the British Airways twin-engined BAC111 on a flight from Manchester to London and allowed the 46 passengers, most of whom were unaware of the hijack, to file off when it landed earlier at London's Heathrow airport.

Outlook always the same

Outlook for six-year-old Pinkie's Boy, Dorset horn ram at Geoff Mitchell's Sea Bluff Farm in Metchosin, is obscured by growth of his massive horns. But his past is productive — an expected 80 lambs this season on farm where he is sole sire. Mitchell says Pinkie's Boy has to turn head sideways to see what's in front of him. 'Police harass Courtenay kids'

COURTENAY — Harassment of juveniles by police is one of several complaints drawn to the attention of a subcommittee named here to survey the need for an ombudsman.

Subcommittee member Joyce Hicks has told a steering committee that other items brought to her group's attention included:

- Unemployment benefits being cut off without notice.
- Juveniles being unable to see a lawyer before a court appearance.
- Police tearing apart houses when executing search warrants.
- Insufficient facilities for juvenile offenders, and the need of more psychiatric examination for juveniles.

While the matter of an ombudsman has been tabled until later, the steering committee has recommended that a justice council be set up in the Comox Valley at a public meeting tonight in Courtenay elementary school.

A proposal that the steering committee remain in office to draft a constitution and set guidelines will b eamong re-

Four dead in riot by 12,000 miners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A riot by 12,000 striking workers idled the world's largest gold mine Tuesday and left four miners dead and 22 injured, police said.

At least 4,000 men at Vaal Reefs, about 100 miles southwest of Johannesburg, told officials of the Anglo-American Corp. they wanted to terminate their contracts and go home to neighboring Lesotho. Anglo-American is South Africa's largest mining firm.

Hundreds of armed police remained on the alert at the Vaal Reefs compound, which houses 32,000 workers and is the largest gold mining complex in the world.

The strikers are protesting legislation in their country which compels its expatriate workers to deposit 60 per cent of their earnings in Lesotho banks.

Barrett presses Ottawa for talks on gas taxes

Premier Barrett accused the federal government Tuesday of further confusing the controversy over natural gas taxation and insisted that the issue be settled "next week . . . by a direct meeting."

In a telegram sent Tuesday, Barrett asked for a meeting next Tuesday of himself and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald with Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister John Turner and Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

The premier's telegram was in response to one by Public Works Minister C. M. Drury, who is acting prime minister, suggesting that B.C. adopt the same attitude in the dispute as the Alberta government.

At stake is up to $125 million in annual profits made by the B.C. Petroleum Corporation, which buys gas from producers and re-sells to consumers, mainly in the U.S. export market.

In the federal budget, Ottawa imposed taxes on gas producers at fair market value, a price much higher than the actual price paid by the corporation. Producers claim the effect will be to tax them at more than 100 per cent of their actual profits.

Alberta eased the burden on producers by increasing wellhead prices but B.C. has insisted that the federal move is an intrusion into provincial jurisdiction over natural resources.

The controversy has almost halted oil and gas exploration in B.C. and Barrett requested

Oil strike held off

DENVER (UPI) — Locals of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union were ordered Wednesday to continue working without contracts and to resume negotiations with petroleum companies across the country, averting for the time being a nationwide strike by refinery workers.

Snow misses Victoria

Up-Island roads virtually closed

Northern Vancouver Island roads were nearly impassable, the Malahat was treacherous and yet Victoria roads remained clear Tuesday night as a rapidly-moving Pacific weather front swept over the Island.

Campbell River RCMP reported a foot of snow just before midnight with more continuing to fall at the rate of an inch an hour.

Gold River and Kelsey Bay highways were in extremely poor condition, with more than half a foot of snow and snow-plows unable to keep up.

Close to 18 inches of snow was piling up on Courtenay and Comox roads by late Tuesday night and police there said few motorists were venturing out.

Three inches of powder had settled by early Tuesday night at Nanaimo and was still falling, and Duncan police said cars "were strewn all over the roads."

Fifteen minor accidents had been reported on the Malahat by 6 p.m., most involving cars which had been unable to climb hills, skidded out of control and landed in ditches.

At Sidney, between one and two inches fell and roads were in poor condition.

Snow fell steadily all day Tuesday at most up-Island points, but Greater Victoria received mostly rain.

The Victoria weather office described the fast-moving front as intense. It was one of the lowest pressure systems to hit the Island this winter.

The storm brought gusts of wind in excess of 60 miles an hour, sustained winds of 30 to 40 miles an hour and will probably bring snow showers to Greater Victoria today as cooler temperatures are expected.

Qualicum Beach council briefs

Fire cover set for French Creek

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — At the inaugural meeting Monday, Qualicum Beach council decided on a one-year contract with Nanaimo Region Board to provide fire protection to the western portion of French Creek area between Qualicum Beach and Parksville.

The Qualicum Beach volunteer fire department will use two vehicles for fighting fires in the French Creek, and will keep the pumper truck in the village at all times. The department will need radios to provide fire protection for the village when a fire is also being fought in French Creek and an additional five men, probably from French Creek, will be recruited.

The regional board will levy a five-mill tax on French Creek Properties, to cover the cost of the fire protection, and it is estimated this will add $7,500 to the volunteer fire department's equipment budget.

Qualicum Beach has not given fire protection services to areas outside the village since 1965.

Nanaimo Region Board has asked Parksville to enter a contract to cover the eastern part of French Creek.

Qualicum Beach council has been notified that Nanaimo Region Board's engineers are drawing up several proposals for the disposal of effluent from a sewage collection system to be installed in the village.

Until the regional board has made a decision on the most suitable proposal no date will be set for the system's installation.

Provisional budgets were approved for 1975. The general budget is for $601,300 and the water works budget $68,000.

Mayor Bruce Brown gave a summary of Qualicum Beach expenditures in 1974. The budget was for $500,000, with revenues $19,000 above the forecast, and expenditures $3,000 more than expected, leaving the village with a surplus of $16,000. Revenue from the water works were $70,500, and expenditures $65,000.

Council decided that water meters will be read every month to prevent wastage.

Previously meters were read only during the summer months but during the rest of the year, some residents use large quantities of water. One, used 350,000 gallons in one month. The average is under 1,000 per month, in winter.

Council expects the cost of reading meters will be more than offset by the additional revenue and that if residents know their meters are being read, they will use less water and save pumping costs.

Six aldermen were appointed chairmen of committees. Ald. Ted Parker heads road transport, cemetery and solid waste disposal committees; Ald. Leonard Sullivan parks, recreation and fire department; and Ald. John Horsland to water works, airport and waste water disposal committees.

Ald. Howard Ward will be the village's representative on Central Vancouver Island Union board of health and Vancouver Island Regional Library board. Mayor Bruce Brown will chair the finance committee and be an ex-officio member of all other committees.

Padrker was appointed deputy mayor. Sullivan was appointed alternative representative on Nanaimo Region Board. Brown is the village's elected representative on this board but will not be able to serve for six to eight weeks for medical reasons.

Langford man fined $300

A Langford area resident, Terrance Paul Weaever, was fined $300 and put on probation for one year in Victoria County Court Monday for possession of MDA.

Weaver was originally charged with possession of MDA for the purpose of trafficking. After he pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of possession the judge found him not guilty of the more serious charge.

Courtenay city council

Speech saved for Saturday

COURTENAY — City administrator Derrick Ratcliffe conducted swearing in ceremonies Monday for one new alderman, Ross Sinclair, and incumbents A. H. Strachan and George Cochrane.

Mayor William Moore, who did not make an inaugural speech Monday, said he will be making this speech at a dinner Saturday night marking the 60th anniversary of the election of the city's first mayor and council in 1915.

Ald. Robert McPhee was elected alternate municipal director to the Comox-Strathcona Region Board and Feb. 3 was set as the date for a court of revision.

Committee chairmen named by the mayor are: finance, McPhee; protection services, Ald. Ronald Webber; public works and water, Strachan; health and social services, Ald. Mary Davie; parks, recreation and community services, Sinclair; administration and personnel, Cochrane. Moore is ex-officio member of all committees.

The court of revision on foot frontage tax and voters list comprises Moore, McPhee and Strachan, with Webber named chairman of the traffic advisory committee. Other members are William Schneider, Randy Mulcaster, Lawrence Burns, Robert Waugh, Kenneth Osmond and Ratcliffe.

Council representatives to other boards and organizations are: regional board, Moore; union board of health, Davie; board of variance, Kenneth Willis; civil defence, Webber; Vancouver Island regional library, Davie; parks and recreation, Sinclair; advisory planning commission, Strachan, Davie, William Mantle, Waugh, Gordon Blackhall, A. T. Rae, S. B. Hagen and E. L. Cronk; family court, Davie.

Ford firms up 55-mile limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has signed legislation setting a permanent 55-mile-an-hour national speed limit. The 55-mile-an-hour speed limit was imposed as a temporary measure during last winter's energy crisis and would have expired June 30. Ford said in a statement that the permanent speed limit is needed not only to save fuel, but also to reduce the loss of life from highway accidents.

DUNCAN — North Cowichan council this week discussed an engineering study which dealt with severe pollution of Quamichan Lake.

Ald. Tom Burge, pollution control committee chairman, told council that at this time "it is beyond the municipality's financial capabilities to rescue the lake from its present state."

"Maybe in the future we will have suitable sewer facilities to stop the nutrients from the septic tanks and fertilizer which seep into the lake from the farms and homes which surround the lake," said Burge.

The study by Willis, Cunliffe and Tait, consulting engineers, attributes algae growth in the lake to the nurients.

Ald. John Cannon, public works committee chairman, agreed that costs of remedying the situation would hinder any major solution to the problem at this time, but he felt something could be done for the time being.

"The public works department should look at the outlet of the lake to see if this could be widened to increase the flow of water at different periods of the year."

It was suggested in the report a flushing action during the summer months when algae growth was greatest, might help.

Council agreed with Canron, and suggested the works superintendent look into the possibilities.

Ald. Frank Jameson points to troubled Ladysmith harbor

Ladysmith harbor pollution

After year's study government asks more questions

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

LADYSMITH — The Ladysmith harbor management plan, prepared by the department of lands, forest and water resources, will not be ready until early spring.

Co-ordinator of the study for the department, ecologist Jonathon Sector, said more data was necessary to augment the study which started in January last year.

"We have to conduct a social survey in the area to determine the likes and dislikes of the people," Sector said.

The plan, which will also cover the foreshore and adjacent upland areas, was prompted by the Ladysmith Harbor Association, a group of local people interested in establishing a locally-based authority for the harbor.

At present, management of the harbor is divided between the provincial and federal governments.

The association, established four years ago, wants a multi-use harbor under local authority for industry, recreation, and the growing of shellfish.

Shellfish beds are now being contaminated by pollution in the harbor.

Recreational use of the harbor has also been stymied by debris and logging operations.

In January last year, the department of lands, forest and water resources agreed to the setting up of an advisory committee.

The harbor plan advisory committee, made up of representatives of the Cowichan Regional Board, Chemainus Indian Band and Ladysmith town council, has made some recommendations on the social and land-use aspirations of the residents.

Committee chairman, Frank Jameson, said the committee would first like to see safe, pollution-free, swimming beaches and easier public access to the beach area.

"We would also like a harbor which will support edible shellfish as well as other fish."

The Chemainus Indian band specifically requests a pollution-free harbor, for the harvesting of shellfish, as a supplementary source of income for many low-income families and a food supply for the band.

The committee would also like to see a debris-free harbor which would enable the public to use it for boating and fishing.

Ladysmith Harbor is now used primarily for log storage, sorting and loading of freighters.

"I appreciate that industry is necessary to put bread and butter on the tables of the majority of people in this area, but I would point out that logs and particularly unbarked logs are a major contributor to water pollution," Jameson said.

"We feel it will take time to bring about the removal of logs, and we accept the fact that the established mills and the Crown Zellerbach dumping ground here should be given lee-way until such time as it is practical to go to dry-land sorting and storage."

"However, we feel that all transient logs should be dumped, sorted and loaded elsewhere."

Transient logs are dumped or towed into the harbor, sorted and then re-loaded onto barges or towed out again.

The Ladysmith harbor plan advisory committee wants the provincial government to establish a local authority which would be appointed by the town of Ladysmith, Chemainus Indian band and the Regional Board.

"If authority locally infers harbor administration by an appointee or appointees responsible to anybody other than this group, it would be unacceptable to us," Jameson said.

Inspector begins investigation

Courtenay group withdraws conflict of interest charge

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Correspondent

COURTENAY — Charges of conflict of interest made by a group of residents against some city aldermen and the chairman of the Advisory Planning Commission, Gordon Blackhall, were withdrawn Tuesday.

Raymond Skelly, spokesman for the group, told The Colonist Tuesday that a telegram was sent to James Lorimer, Minister of municipal affairs, Tuesday afternoon, asking him "to disregard the charges."

The charges were contained in a letter from downtown businessman, Inno Schaefer, sent last week to the inspector of municipalities.

Skelly said the decision to withdraw the charges was made after consultations with the group's lawyer.

Courtenay Mayor William Moore said Tuesday he had a telephone conversation with inspector of municipalities Robert Prittie, and was told that Prittie had written to Courtenay city administrator Derrick Ratcliffe, asking for a complete report on procedures used in connection with the processing of a land-use contract for a proposed shopping centre at the southern entrance of the city.

Prittie has also requested all minutes of council, and the Advisory Planning Commission's report to council, or any other relevant documents, so they may be examined.

Mayor Moore said Prittie had told him that after reviewing the documents, an officer of the municipal affairs department may visit Courtenay to obtain further details if this is considered necessary.

The mayor said he had been advised by Prittie that a public inquiry cannot be ordered by the inspector of municipalities — that this has to be done through an order-in-council.

The issue was sparked last week when a group of residents, many of them downtown businessmen, announced they were asking the inspector of municipalities to conduct an inquiry into alleged irregularities in connection with two giant plaza projects.

At its inaugural meeting Monday, council voted to demand an inquiry by the inspector.

Responding to this charge at Monday's council meeting, Moore said he took strong exception to this, "the worst kind of slander done by innuendo."

He said he resented the charge on behalf of council and resented even further the charge levelled against Blackhall.

The group is seeking to have bylaws 1090 and 1123 quashed by the inspector. However, Moore told a group of 12 citizens in the council chamber Monday, many of them downtown merchants, that "only the court can quash a bylaw."

Responding to a charge that council had failed to comply with section 702A of the Municipal Act — failure to adequately plan — the mayor said "councils over the past number of years have complied with the act."

Dealing with charges of "irregular procedures," the mayor said it was obvious the group did not know that notice of motion had been waived. The group had contended that the land-use contracts were amended by council without proper notice.

The mayor also told the group that only one bylaw has so far been ratified by council. This bylaw, given fourth and final reading just prior to Christmas, deals with the shopping centre proposed for the southern entrance to the city. The other bylaw, dealing with construction of a $3.5 million mall on Ryan Road, has only received first three readings.

A meeting is scheduled for next Monday to discuss a request by Dominion Construction for an extension to finalize plans and sign a land-use contract.

Moore
. . . "slander"

He talked too much

COURTENAY — A man charged with two counts of false pretenses by passing worthless cheques was forcibly removed from provincial court Monday after a scuffle in the courtroom.

Judge Alfred Scow ordered John Anderson, 25, of no fixed address, removed after he scuffled with sheriff George Larsen.

The scuffle erupted after Anderson refused to stop talking while court was in session.

"Take your hands off me," the accused man shouted as Larsen attempted to escort him from the room.

He had been warned several times by the judge to be quiet, but refused to stop talking.

Anderson was remanded to Feb. 10.

Students to survey contentious issues

COURTENAY — Newly-elected alderman, Ross Sinclair, has lost no time in involving himself in his civic duties.

He announced Tuesday that he had enlisted the aid of students to conduct a survey Thursday and Friday in an attempt to obtain "a true impression of residents' feelings with regard to several contentious issues.

"The discussion of shopping centres has be no means come to its conclusion, and it is for this reason I am going to conduct the survey," Sinclair said.

"In my opinion, there was not enough input into city hall for the council of two years ago to obtain a true impression of the citizen's ideas and what they would like to have in their city."

The new alderman said it is almost a foregone conclusion that Courtenay will have one shopping centre at its southern entrance.

"I would like to pose the following questions, questions I feel should have been asked two years ago:

Are you happy about the one shopping centre and its location?

Would you like to see the downtown core built up and beautified in a special decor — tudor style similar to the Laver's department store, Spanish or modern?

Neon signs are becoming an eyesore at the side of the road. Would you like to see them removed and placed flush against the wall of each building — similar to the signs at Mr. Mike's Steakhouse?

Are you in agreement with spot location of shopping centres, or do you feel they should be contained in the downtown core?

Sinclair said results of the survey will be presented to council as a point of interest and will also be compared with a planning study commissioned by the city seven years ago, at a cost of $18,000 "which incidentally, everyone seems to be ignoring."

The decision to conduct the survey comes during a controversy over proposed shopping centre developments.

Derailment blocks line

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Traffic on the CP mainline was halted by a derailment of 20 cars of a westbound coal train near this community in eastern B.C. There were no injuries. Rail officials said they did not know how long the line would be blocked.

Woolworth case

Dismissed women to get job back

DUNCAN — The B.C. Labor Relations Board has supported the case of two Duncan women who were illegally dismissed last summer for union activity at F. W. Woolworth Company Ltd. Both women have been ordered reinstated.

"These women were fired without ever having been told their work was unsatisfactory," said a three-member panel of the board in a written decision.

The dismissals of Enid Parkes, checkout cashier, last June 20, and Theresa Cartwright, paint department employee, last June 17, occurred in spite of Woolworth's policy that "faults or shortcomings" in work will be discussed, and employees will be dismissed for "dishonesty, insubordination, incompetence" or "serious infraction" of company rules.

The board said Mrs. Cartwright was fired after a paint salesman for an outside firm "apparently" told the store manager she was organizing a union.

Miss Parkes was fired after discussing the union with the garden department manager, the board said.

Under the Labor Code, this put the burden of proof of innocence on the store, and the board found the company violated a section of the code prohibiting discipline or discharge for union activity.

The board said lawyers for both sides must meet to decide the amount of back pay and, failing agreement, the board will make a decision.

Workers may strike

PORT ALBERNI — City workers may strike next week if a meeting Friday with city officials and mediator Clark Gilmour produces no contract settlement.

Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 118 president Barry Bowman said the workers will continue a work-to-rule campaign which started Saturday.

Much negotiating must be done to reach a settlement, Bowman said.

The city hasn't offered the workers the year-round wage parity that they want with local industrial workers, he said.

The earliest possible date on which the workers could strike would be Jan. 14, by which time Gilmour should have filed his report, Bowman said.

Nanaimo schools stay closed

NANAIMO — Schools continue to operate on an hour-a-day basis in the Nanaimo school district. The schools are picketed by members of Local 606 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

However, about half of the 12,500 students who attend the 43 schools involved, were unable to reach schools Monday and Tuesday, because school bus drivers were among the 175 non-teaching employees who are on a "rotating strike."

No meeting between the union and school board was scheduled at press time.

Strike hits Port Alberni schools

By RICHARD TERMAAT
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — A decision to strike was made Tuesday by 125 members of non-teaching staff in the Alberni School District 70.

The strike is to start at 8 a.m. today.

The decision was made during a meeting of the executive of Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 727 Tuesday afternoon.

School board chairman, Mark Mosher, had asked the union to meet with the board at 9 a.m. today in an attempt to avert the strike.

Union officials have said they will meet with the board.

The local's president, Albert Geurtsen, said "the main bone of contention is the slowness with which the board has been negotiating the contract.

"As far as a specific issue is concerned, there is none, since nothing has been decided," he said.

He said the strike would be "all inclusive and not a rotating strike."

School superintendent Ron Lyon said the district will keep its 27 schools in the Port Alberni and West Coast areas open "to the best of our ability and for as long as possible."

The only difficulty is with transportation of students by bus, he said.

He was not able to say how many of the district's 8,500 students will be affected by the bus driver's refusal to work.

"We anticipate a full day's classes and will re-asses this policy as the strike progresses," Lyon said.

The district's 420 teachers will continue normal classroom routine but will refuse to do the work usually done by the non-teaching staff, a spokesman for the Alberni District Teacher's Association said.

The ADTA sympathises with the workers and will report to the district, the CUPE local, and the ADTA any non-union workers brought into the schools, he said.

The spokesman said the ADTA will also provide legal aid for any teacher who thinks that he or she cannot cross picket lines and will be subsequently suspended by the board.

Contract talks broke off Saturday after two meetings with mediator Clark Gilmour.

The union voted for strike action after the publication Dec. 17 of the board's final offer, which included an overall 15 per cent increase.

An official source said the board had increased that offer but declined to say by how much.

Spring came early

Spring comes early to Geoff Mitchell's Sea Bluff Farm in Metchosin. Baby lambs started arriving Christmas Eve and, by Tuesday, numbered about 40. Mitchell, who has been raising sheep ever since he moved to Vancouver Island 25 years ago, expects total of 80 lambs by mid-January. He started with three sheep, ran herd up to 100, but says it's tapering off now. Present herd consists of about 60 ewes and one ram. Owing to high cost of grain he fed ewes on hay before lambing and finds sheep and offspring healthier than usual. Admiring new lambs are neighbors Renge Black, 5, left, and brother Sailen, 7.

Murder case, trial set

NANAIMO — Marilyn Joan Frank, also known as Marilyn Wells, 33, was committed for higher court trial Monday on a charge of murder punishable by life in prison.

She was charged after the body of Frank C. Wells, 43, of Richmond was found Nov. 20 aboard his 36-foot boat at the harbor float base here. He had been fatally stabbed.

UIC raiding provincial treasury, civil servant charges

'Unemployed dumped on welfare'

By LORRAINE ATHERTON
Colonist Reporter

A provincial civil servant has charged the Unemployment Insurance Commission with "robbing the provincial treasury" by arbitrarily withholding unemployment benefits and forcing the temporarily jobless onto welfare rolls.

Walter Muller, a job-finder for welfare recipients in Vancouver and a Social Credit candidate in the last federal election, estimated that about 20 per cent or $24 million of B.C.'s welfare payments went to people whose unemployment insurance benefits had been delayed or "callously" cut off.

That estimate was a conservative one, Muller said, because it was based on welfare statistics released in September. Since then, rising unemployment had escalated the problem and UIC appeared to be making it even tougher for people to collect benefits, he said.

In Victoria, Janette Shelton, vice-president of Community Action Group, agreed with Muller.

She guessed that the number of individuals who went to her group with unemployment insurance problems had increased by 10 per cent in the last three months. Although she handled mainly formal appeals to the UIC, she said, she knew of many people who had trouble simply finding out whether they qualify for benefits.

One woman had been waiting six months, she said.

People had always complained about UIC, and problems had increased with the recent jump in unemployment, Ms. Shelton noted.

The delays must certainly cost the human resources department, because "our usual course is to send these people to social assistance," she added.

Every available ship thrown at huge slick

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Singapore mobilized all available ships and men Tuesday night in a massive effort to contain and disperse a million-gallon oil slick already threatening the western part of the port, the world's fourth largest.

The 10-mile slick came from three ruptured tanks of the Japanese 237,698-ton supertanker Showa Maru, which ran onto rocks five miles southeast of Singapore at daybreak Monday.

Habitual crime will draw longer terms

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

Tougher terms of probation and longer jail sentences are in the offing for habitual criminals in B.C., according to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

Macdonald said Tuesday that he was "increasingly coming to the opinion that some people cannot be rehabilitated. All the noble experiments of the past 20 years simply do not work in the terms of prison rehabilitation of people."

On Jan. 23 the attorney-general will be meeting with federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and local municipalities on the Lower Mainland to discuss crime and policing problems.

"We shall try to present a case for better-trained police services and more extensive police services," Macdonald said. "And we shall continue to emphasize the need to prevent crime."

The attorney-general said the time had come when decisions must be made on "who is dangerous to society and therefore has to be confined, or under some form of probation that protects society."

Non-dangerous criminals will be treated differently, Macdonald said. "Where alternative forms of sentencing can be imposed without endangering society, that will be our aim. We shall be sure that these people are not damaged and made worse than they are at the present time in terms of anti-social behavior."

Macdonald said the matter of bail laws was also on the agenda for discussion.

Record wage accepted

Freights rolling on BCR tracks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first freight trains to move on British Columbia railway tracks since a strike by shopcraft workers began six weeks ago were in operation Tuesday.

Two northbound trains, one out of North Vancouver and one out of Prince George, started moving shortly after a new nine-month contract between shopcraft workers and the railway was signed.

A spokesman for the government-owned railway said it would take about seven days for operations to return to normal.

The 550 employees, members of five shopcraft unions, voted 242-to-106 in favor of a new nine-month agreement which Norm Farley, chief union negotiator, said would make the workers the highest-paid railway workers in North America.

The contract includes a wage increase of $1.29 an hour which raises the basic tradesman rate to $7.09 an hour from $5.80. It also provides for an inquiry into labor-management relations between the crown corporation and the unions.

Company and union representatives signed the new contract Tuesday.

When the shopcraft workers walked out Nov. 21, the company had offered an increase of 87 cents an hour, while the unions were seeking an immediate increase of $1.25 and another mid-contract increase of 20 cents an hour.

The new contract expires July 30.

The strike had resulted in layoffs of about 2,000 of the 3,200-member BCR work force.

The strike led to temporary food shortages in some areas dependent on the railway, which runs from North Vancouver to Fort St. John. The dispute also resulted in further cutbacks in an already depressed forest industry in the province's interior.

British hijacking

Fake gun, fake bomb —and fake airport

LONDON (UPI) — A man of Arab appearance seized a British jetliner in flight and extorted $235,000 in ransom Tuesday in a bluff with an imitation pistol and a dummy grenade. The hijacker was captured when the pilot flew him to an airfield near London instead of to France as the gunman demanded.

The hijacker, in his late 20s, was overpowered by a police doghandler as he ran from the plane after landing at Stansted airport, 34 miles northeast of London.

He left the ransom behind in the plane and was carrying what Scotland Yard deputy commissioner Wilfred Gibson said was a "replica pistol." As for the suspected grenade cannister carried on the plane by the hijacker, Gibson said, "No explosives have been found."

The only casualty in the capture was British Airways steward Alan Bond, 35, one of five hostages the hijacker took. He was nipped by a police dog in the scuffle on the darkened airfield.

Gibson said the hijacker refused to answer police questions and he could not immediately identify him or his motives. He described him as of "Arab appearance with very long hair and a mustache. He spoke good English to the pilot but he is almost certainly not British."

The hijacker seized the British Airways twin-engined BAC111 on a flight from Manchester to London and allowed the 46 passengers, most of whom were unaware of the hijack, to file off when it landed earlier at London's Heathrow airport.

Outlook always the same

Outlook for six-year-old Pinkie's Boy, Dorset horn ram at Geoff Mitchell's Sea Bluff Farm in Metchosin, is obscured by growth of his massive horns. But his past is productive — an expected 80 lambs this season on farm where he is sole sire. Mitchell says Pinkie's Boy has to turn head sideways to see what's in front of him. Harassment by police?

COURTENAY — Harassment of juveniles by police is one of several complaints drawn to the attention of a subcommittee named here to survey the need for an ombudsman.

Subcommittee member Joyce Hicks has told a steering committee that other items brought to her group's attention included:

- Unemployment benefits being cut off without notice.
- Juveniles being unable to see a lawyer before a court appearance.
- Police tearing apart houses when executing search warrants.
- Insufficient facilities for juvenile offenders, and the need of more psychiatric examination for juveniles.

While the matter of an ombudsman has been tabled until later, the steering committee has recommended that a justice council be set up in the Comox Valley at a public meeting tonight in Courtenay elementary school.

A proposal that the steering committee remain in office to draft a constitution and set guidelines will be among re-

Four dead in riot by 12,000 miners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A riot by 12,000 striking workers idled the world's largest gold mine Tuesday and left four miners dead and 22 injured, police said.

At least 4,000 men at Vaal Reefs, about 100 miles southwest of Johannesburg, told officials of the Anglo-American Corp. they wanted to terminate their contracts and go home to neighboring Lesotho. Anglo-American is South Africa's largest mining firm.

Hundreds of armed police remained on the alert at the Vaal Reefs compound, which houses 32,000 workers and is the largest gold mining complex in the world.

The strikers are protesting legislation in their country which compels its expatriate workers to deposit 60 per cent of their earnings in Lesotho banks.

Barrett presses Ottawa for talks on gas taxes

Premier Barrett accused the federal government Tuesday of further confusing the controversy over natural gas taxation and insisted that the issue be settled "next week . . . by a direct meeting."

In a telegram sent Tuesday, Barrett asked for a meeting next Tuesday of himself and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald with Prime Minister Trudeau, Finance Minister John Turner and Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

The premier's telegram was in response to one by Public Works Minister C. M. Drury, who is acting prime minister, suggesting that B.C. adopt the same attitude in the dispute as the Alberta government.

At stake is up to $125 million in annual profits made by the B.C. Petroleum Corporation, which buys gas from producers and re-sells to consumers, mainly in the U.S. export market.

In the federal budget, Ottawa imposed taxes on gas producers at fair market value, a price much higher than the actual price paid by the corporation. Producers claim the effect will be to tax them at more than 100 per cent of their actual profits.

Alberta eased the burden on producers by increasing wellhead prices but B.C. has insisted that the federal move is an intrusion into provincial jurisdiction over natural resources.

The controversy has almost halted oil and gas exploration in B.C. and Barrett requested

Oil strike held off

DENVER (UPI) — Locals of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union were ordered Wednesday to continue working without contracts and to resume negotiations with petroleum companies across the country, averting for the time being a nationwide strike by refinery workers.

Snow misses Victoria

Up-Island roads virtually closed

Northern Vancouver Island roads were nearly impassable, the Malahat was treacherous and yet Victoria roads remained clear Tuesday night as a rapidly-moving Pacific weather front swept over the Island.

Campbell River RCMP reported a foot of snow just before midnight with more continuing to fall at the rate of an inch an hour.

Gold River and Kelsey Bay highways were in extremely poor condition, with more than half a foot of snow and snow-plows unable to keep up.

Close to 18 inches of snow was piling up on Courtenay and Comox roads by late Tuesday night and police there said few motorists were venturing out.

Three inches of powder had settled by early Tuesday night at Nanaimo and was still falling, and Duncan police said cars "were strewn all over the roads."

Fifteen minor accidents had been reported on the Malahat by 6 p.m., most involving cars which had been unable to climb hills, skidded out of control and landed in ditches.

At Sidney, between one and two inches fell and roads were in poor condition.

Snow fell steadily all day Tuesday at most up-Island points, but Greater Victoria received mostly rain.

The Victoria weather office described the fast-moving front as intense. It was one of the lowest pressure systems to hit the Island this winter.

The storm brought gusts of wind in excess of 60 miles an hour, sustained winds of 30 to 40 miles an hour and will probably bring snow showers to Greater Victoria today as cooler temperatures are expected.

Died in rescue bid, Victorian cited

A Victoria man who lost his life while attempting to rescue a fisherman adrift in Lake Superior will be posthumously awarded the Star of Courage, Canada's second highest decoration for bravery.

Kari Joronen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Antti Joronen, 740 Burdett, died May 29, 1973, at the age of 29. He is one of four Canadians who will be honored for acts of heroism at an investiture in Government House, Ottawa, this spring.

Joronen, a graduate of Victoria high school, was with helicopter pilot Victor Solomatenko of Toronto when the two tried to resuce Aime Breton.

The helicopter hovered over Breton and lowered a rope but the fisherman was too exhausted from exposure to grasp it.

Joronen climbed out of the helicopter cabin and stood outside while the pilot brought the machine closer to the water. The helicopter dropped into the lake and overturned.

Solomatenko managed to escape but Joronen and Breton were lost. Solomatenko will also be awarded the Star of Courage.

Joronen's father Tuesday night remembered his son as a young man who was "always active, always leading an outdoor life."

Born in Finland, he moved here with his family about 20 years ago.

He started flying with the Kinsmen Air Cadet corps and later took flying lessons in Sudbury, Ont., as well as in Victoria.

When he had earned his commercial licence, he worked in Florida. He was with White River Air Service in Wawa, Ont., at the time of his death.

He had worked as a diver and quartermaster on one trip of the icebreaker Camsell to the Arctic. Besides being an accomplished skier and fisherman, he was an oil painter and portrait artist.

Tug's cook played hero's role

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

A great big oil stove, a great-hearted Geordie cook and mouth-watering, five-course meals at Christmas and New Year's played a major part in keeping the morale of Sudbury II afloat during her nine-day rescue ordeal.

With a minimum of fuss, the rugged tug slipped quietly into Victoria's Inner Harbor Tuesday after hauling the battered freighter Corinna through a thousand miles of angry Pacific waters.

Both her master, Capt. Frank Culbard of Vancouver, and her chief engineer, Victoria's Harry Sapro, singled out Sudbury II cook Terry Garraghan from the 16-man crew for special praise.

Sapro, a seaman since 1943, knows better than most that a grouchy cook makes for a miserable crew, while a proper, easy-going ship's cook like Garraghan, can make "all the difference in the world" in keeping morale high.

Of the Christmas and New Year's dinners, Sapro said: "You could go downtown and pay $40 a head and you couldn't get a meal like he cooked us."

The Christmas meal Garragham cooked in the storm consisted of: Hors d'oeuvres, giblet soup, filet of sole meuniere, shrimp vol-au-vents, roast turkey, dressing, chipolata, asparagus tips with cream sauce, carrots, buttered green peas, whipped potatoes, straw potatoes.

And he followed that with plum pudding, rum sauce, mince pies, assorted nuts and candies.

And Garraghan, of 1120 Loenholm, a 32-year veteran of the high seas, was pleased to return the compliment Tuesday.

He termed the crew "just fantastic" in the way they helped out and held on to their cool and their plates while 40-foot seas whipped by 100 mile an hour winds rocked the Sudbury II.

A Geordie (a native of Newcastle), who came from England's soccer-conscious northeast to Victoria 12 years ago, Garraghan's average sea-shift is 12 hours daily.

On Christmas Day and at New Year's he worked a full 18 hours.

He would rather cook at sea than on land because on terra firma, "well, you don't know your guests."

"If you put your back into it, you can do it," Garraghan says about cooking with "fridge doors flying open and stuff falling out."

The chef's specialty is curried chicken, the recipe for which he refuses to divulge.

Sudbury II was in Port Alberni when she went to rescue the Corinna, Christmas Eve.

The Liberian freighter had been dead in the water since Dec. 18 in the stormy Gulf of Alaska.

Captain Jung-Wen, 36, of the Corinna, and his 40-men crew were stranded helplessly when the boilers in the 510-foot vessel quit about 1,200 miles northwest of Vancouver Island.

The Corinna was towed into Vancouver Monday night by Sudbury II where her cargo of 223 Datsun automobiles were found to be undamaged despite the 19-day ordeal in the Pacific.

The Sudbury, owned by Seaspan International Ltd. is one of the most powerful tugs in the world. Among the ships it has rescued are The Atlantic Sun, Elli, Olympic Palms, Tainan, Lefkipos and Van Lene.

Pregnant ewes, ram killed

Roaming dogs destroy small flock of sheep

The Alan Littlers in Happy Valley had their small flock of sheep wiped out last weekend by dogs.

"We were just trying to build our little flock up," Mrs. Littler said Tuesday night. "They killed three pregnant ewes and one registered ram and left us nothing."

Mrs. Littler said the animals were found in the creek bed Saturday morning.

Dale Carnegie, domestic animal protection officer for the district, told The Colonist the dogs came about 5 a.m. Saturday, "did their business and were gone."

"You can tell it was dogs by the way they operated," Carnegie said.

This is the first sheep-killing of the year by dogs, he added, and "unless people take responsibility for their dogs, the killing will increase."

He said the kills are most prevalent at lambing time and, "unless people realize that their dog, any dog, is looked after, it can become a killer, it will get worse."

Carnegie said the new Domestic Animal Protection Act "has a lot more teeth in it than previous laws."

Fines to be levied against owners of dogs which kill sheep range from $15 to $500 and fines for non-purchase of licences run from $50 to $500.

"We're doing everything we can to prevent the kills," he went on. Mrs. Joan Yates and Carnegie are domestic animal protection officers for the area from View Royal to Sooke.

"We're patrolling as much and as widely as we can," he said, "but we can't be everywhere. We're picking up as many dogs as we can and of course that brings a $5 fine."

Sheep rancher Geoff Mitchell of Metchosin said he conducted a survey six years ago of sheep killed by dogs and found that there was a 12-per-cent loss of flock each year.

He sets dog traps on his property. The dogs go for meat bait and then find themselves enclosed in a cage. Mitchell then takes the dogs to the pound. They are not harmed and, in this way, he has protected his herd for the past three years.

Spring came early

Spring comes early to Geoff Mitchell's Sea Bluff Farm in Metchosin. Baby lambs started arriving Christmas Eve and, by Tuesday, numbered about 40. Mitchell, who has been raising sheep ever since he moved to Vancouver Island 25 years ago, expects total of 80 lambs by mid-January. He started with three sheep, ran herd up to 100, but says it's tapering off now. Present herd consists of about 60 ewes and one ram. Owing to high cost of grain he fed ewes on hay before lambing and finds sheep and offspring healthier than usual. Admiring new lambs are neighbors Renge Black, 5, left, and brother Sailen, 7.

B.C. Tel told to give back security funds

By STEPHEN BREWER
Colonist Reporter

The B.C. Supreme Court has been asked to order B.C. Tel to refund about $140,000 worth of security deposits the company has collected from its customers, the Colonist learned Tuesday.

A motion was filed in Vancouver in mid-November, a staff lawyer for the Vancouver Community Legal Assistance Society said in a telephone interview.

David Massop said the motion had been filed by Allan MacLean, also a VCLAS staff lawyer, on behalf of UBC law student Ross Green.

MacLean said Green was acting on his own behalf and on behalf of all other residential telephone users in the province.

The motion was sparked, at least in part, by complaints from B.C. Tel subscribers in the Courtenay-Campbell River area, the lawyer added.

The action Green is seeking would require B.C. Tel to not only refund the security deposits, which MacLean said totalled roughly $140,000, but also to pay interest to those subscribers who had posted them.

The company has until Jan. 15 to file a defence brief, MacLean said, after which a hearing date will be set.

No company spokesmen in Vancouver could be reached for comment, and a Victoria B.C. Tel spokesman said he was not aware the motion had been filed.

VCLAS won a similar action in December, 1972, against B.C. Hydro.

In that earlier decision, Mr. Justice W. R. McIntyre of the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that security deposits collected by B.C. Hydro from its residential customers were illegal.

The ruling held that public utilities are required to treat all their customers alike and cannot command security deposits from some customers and not from others.

The VCLAS brought the case against Hydro on behalf of Philip Rankin, Alistair Waddell and Karen Chastin, who contended the security deposit was illegal because it was discriminatory.

Vehicles off streets?

The city of Victoria is considering the feasibility of a program to reduce vehicle traffic on residential streets.

The idea is to divert traffic from secondary residential streets to major traffic arteries by installing curbs and planters at specific intersections.

The result would be beautification of residential streets and more safety for pedestrians, especially children.

City council's traffic committee instructed the traffic engineer Tuesday to prepare a study on the cost of treating intersections in the necessary manner.

Council's interest in the matter was sparked by residents of Pembroke who presented a petition to council following a traffic accident last November in which a five-year-old girl was hit by a car and suffered a fractured skull in the 1300-block Pembroke.

The residents asked council to order the installation of speed bumps, but aldermen said that proposal wasn't feasible.

If city council adopts the proposal to use the traffic diversion scheme, Pembroke will probably be the site for a pilot project.

In that case, Pembroke would be closed between Stanley and Oregon. That short block might be converted to a small playground "where kids can shoot a hockey puck," or simply be landscaped.

Traffic normally using Pembroke would be diverted either to Bay or Begbie. Traffic now using Oregon and Stanley would be routed to either Fernwood or Bay.

Traffic department officials told the committee that a similar scheme has been tried successfully in San Francisco.

Phase 3 begins at old building

The provincial government has moved into phase three in its renovation of the old Victoria Press Building at 2631 Douglas. Public Works Minister William Hartley has announced that a contract for $196,913 has been awarded to Dalziel Construction, a Victoria-based firm, for the project.

Donors help blood crisis

About 1,200 blood donors in Nanaimo and Vancouver have helped ease a critical provincial blood shortage that had reduced Royal Jubilee Hospital's operating schedule to emergencies only.

Joan Watson, Red Cross public relations director in Vancouver, said Tuesday the 1,200 pints donated Monday represent a two-day stock for the blood bank, which supplies all provincial hospitals and which was down to about a half-day's supply Monday. The three-day Nanaimo clinic, which started Monday, is the only clinic now operating on Vancouver Island.

Ms. Watson said that to build up a normal supply, about 800 people a day will have to give blood for the rest of this week.

Dr. Ray Le Huque, medical director at Royal Jubilee, said Tuesday the hospital placed a large order for blood Tuesday morning. If it is filled, he said, the hospital will be able to re-schedule surgery cases cancelled Monday when blood at Jubilee dipped to about one day's supply.

He said the hospital should know today if the order has been filled by the blood bank. Hanging in the balance are two open-heart surgery cases scheduled for Friday which can only be performed if the blood arrives. Two open-heart operations which had been planned for Monday have been postponed.

At Victoria General Hospital, which had normal blood supplies Monday, a spokesman said there was no "appreciable change" Tuesday. Surgery at Victoria General wasn't affected by the shortage.

Ms. Watson said the Red Cross requires, and gets about 2,200 donors a week to keep provincial hospitals supplied, "but we always run out just after Christmas and New Year's."

Main reason for the shortage is that clinics aren't held on holidays. This year, "we lost about a whole week of clinics," she said.

Only about 4 per cent of the population donates blood, she added.

Victoria's sights set on $200 hawker's fee

Victoria city aldermen have gone full circle in determining a suitable fee for street hawkers in the proposed Trades Licence Bylaw.

In a caucus meeting Tuesday, council agreed to set the fee at $200 and limit street hawkers to Centennial Square.

Essentially this is the same proposal that was placed before council-in-caucus late last November by Ald. William Tindall.

But, following that meeting, council-in-caucus decided to raise the fee to $700 and restrict the hawkers to one per side of a city block.

At that time, Tindall said the increased fee—highest fee for any type of retailer in the new bylaw — was designed to discourage street hawkers.

But by the time the bylaw reached the Dec. 12 council meeting for first reading, Mayor Peter Pollen said the fee would be lowered as it was not council's intention to discourage street hawkers.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers presented to council-in-caucus amendments that lowered the fee from $700 to $350 and froze the number of hawkers allowed in Centennial Square.

De Villiers said under these amendments, hawkers could either obtain six-month or yearly licences that could be paid for by the month.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson questioned whether hawkers wouldn't just pay for the months they operated and pack up after the tourists left.

Tindall
. . . made point

Caucus then agreed upon Tindall's original $200 fee with no monthly installments and to restrict later, if necessary, the number of licences granted.

Island stop for U.S. tug

The American deepsea tug Gemini, now in tow by the Vancouver tug Ocean Master, is due to stop over in Port Hardy tonight on its way to Seattle.

The Gemini received a cracked stern plate in a storm Thursday which caused her fuel supply to be contaminated by seawater. During the subsequent rescue operation, the weathership Quadra was called in from her post at Station Papa to stand by until Ocean Master arrived to take Gemini in tow.

Motorcyclist dies in creek

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Robert Angus Marander, 35, of Burnaby, was killed and two others injured when their motorcycles went out of control and plunged into a creek two miles south of here.

'Death Alley' on Cook

A section of Cook Street was labelled "Death Alley" Tuesday night by coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre at an inquest into Greater Victoria's first traffic fatality of 1975.

Dorothy Crighton, 76, of 805 Cook, died late Sunday afternoon after being struck by an automobile while crossing Cook at Burdett.

St. Jorre told the jury that Cook between Dallas and Fort was the worst street in his coroner's district for people getting killed.

Pathologist Dr. Bruce Hay told the inquest that Miss Crighton, a retired provincial government librarian and former Colonist music critic, died from massive bleeding in the chest cavity.

The inquest was adjourned until Jan. 13.

Earlier Tuesday, St. Jorre adjourned until March 6, an inquest in the November death of Mrs. Kathleen Arden, 78, of Colwood, to allow RCMP to continue their investigation.

Complaints rise to medical body

Patient complaints about their doctors are increasing, the registrar of the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons said Tuesday.

The number of written complaints that the college receives is increasing, Dr. W. G. McClure said, but most usually involve "a breakdown in communication."

"My impression is that the public is more ready to complain," he said, but he added that B.C. residents don't seem "litigation-minded and that's fortunate. It's not comfortable practising medicine with one eye over your shoulder," which is the situation in some parts of the United States where malpractice suits have become commonplace.

The complaints received by the college—the licensing body for all B.C. doctors—usually concern an alleged failure to provide some service, such as an x-ray.

"It's usually a judgmental decision and the complaint committee tries to explain to the complainant why what happened happened," McClure said. The complaint committee includes a lay member appointed by the provincial government.

McClure said the college receives about 5 or 6 written complaints a month.

The number of charges heard by the college against B.C. physicians has increased, he said, but not out of proportion to the increase in the number of doctors practising here. Last year, about 20 charges were heard by the college—about four of which dealt with unprofessional conduct.

McClure said most Canadian doctors are insured against malpractice suits by the Canadian Medical Protective Association, which is affiliated with the Canadian Medical Association.

It has recently raised its insurance premiums to $100 a year from $50 a year which is still far less than the average $3,000-a-year premiums that some Los Angeles doctors must pay, said McClure.

Tower possible for park

There's a good chance the Esso station tower at Victoria's Inner Harbor will become the centrepiece of a small park.

Initial opposition to Ald. Sam Bawlf, who would like to see the tower preserved as a historic landmark, is dwindling.

City council's central area development committee instructed the city engineer Tuesday to prepare a report on the feasibility of retaining the tower and beautifying the space now occupied by the service station.

The station was bought by the city last year for $225,000 as part of Victoria's program to rehabilitate the Inner Harbor.

The site will be vacated by the end of this month after which the station is to be demolished.

In a brief report to the committee, city planning director Geoffrey Greenhalgh said the "vertical element of the tower and the single horizontal building were integrated into an unusually sophisticated design" at the time of construction in 1930.

Greenhalgh added that the tower could be retained without the service station, although "it loses much of its aesthetic appeal without its original base."
